RUN AND DEATH AS FIREWORKS EXPLODE

ENGINEER ARRESTED IN FATAL FLYER WRECK

WOMAN KILLED, SCORE HURT IN BRIDGE DISASTER AT GREENWICH.

GREENWICH, Ct., July 16.—The White Mountain flyer from New York was wrecked here at 9:30 to-day.

One woman, Miss Marguerite Armstrong of Wayne, Pa., was killed and ten persons injured.

The more seriously injured were:

ACLFORD, GEORGE L., New York, crushed foot.

BIRD, MISS, Wyoming, N. J., injuries to head.

CRANDALL, MRS. C. M., No. 113 West Ninety-second street, contusions of head and body, shock.

CRANDALL, DR. F. M., No. 113 West Ninety-second street, New York, cuts, contusions and shock.

FROST, MR. and MRS. L. T., Mount Vernon, both suffering from contusions and shock.

FROST, MRS. T. W., Mount Vernon, both legs injured.

GICKERSON, MRS. ELIZABETH, No. 395 Adelphi street, Brooklyn, left leg wrenched and cuts and contusions.

GICKERSON, HARRY, No. 395 Adelphi street, Brooklyn, contusions and shock.

PHILLIPS, WM. A., No. 14 Webster avenue, Brooklyn, legs crushed.

WHITMORE, F. G., Newport, N. H., lacerations of legs ruptured and contusions.

Drawn by Heavy Motors.

The express was due at Greenwich, where it made no stop, at 9:30 o'clock, taking an hour in the run from New York. It was drawn by two of the new heavy electric locomotives of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, and was running between fifty and sixty miles an hour when it passed the Greenwich station. Kendall of No. 2311 St. Ames avenue, The Bronx, was the engineer in charge of the leading locomotive and L. May of New York was conductor of the train. Kendall is now under arrest.

Two hundred feet east of the Greenwich station is a bridge which crosses Steamboat road, a thoroughfare forty feet below. The track from the bridge is nearly 100 feet long and at the eastern end is the beginning of a cut through rock, running for about 500 yards. There is a slight curve in the cut, being just beyond the bridge. Four sets of tracks cross the bridge and run through the cut, and the express was on the most southerly track.

Bent Like Rods of Iron.

The coupled electric motors and the train dashed past the station in a swirl of dust. The motors cleared the bridge and struck the beginning of the curve at the eastern end, when their great weight, buttressed by their terrific momentum, was thrown against the outer rail. Whether or not the ties were rotten, investigation will show, at any rate the rails could not withstand the strain and they bent outward like rods of iron.

The heavy cars piled up thundered over the bridge, completed the disaster to the rails and before the entire train was on the bridge it had been derailed for almost its entire length and was bumping over the wooden ties and flooring. Fortunately, the bridge withstood the shock. Had it given way, there must have been appalling loss of life. But although its flooring was torn up and the rails or three of the four tracks were ripped from their fastenings and twisted out of shape as the cars bounded from side to side, the last car cleared the bridge before it came to a stop. Meanwhile the two locomotives and the two forward cars had broken away from the rest of the train and the 500 feet over the tie, before the engineer could check the terrific momentum of the train. The locomotives and two forward cars, although derailed, remained upright.

Woman Pinned Under Chair.

Mrs. Crandall was hurled about and pinned under a chair. Dr. Crandall had gone forward to the smoker only a few minutes before the wreck. Although badly hurt himself, he crawled through a window of the smoker and made his way back to the chair car. He climbed in through a window and found his mother, carrying her out to safety.

The scenes in the cars as they bounded from one twisted, broken track to another were indescribable. Men and women, helpless in that mad carorbing of steel and wood, fought desperately, nevertheless, to reach doors and windows. When the wrecked train finally came to a stop, men, women and children scrambled through the windows of the tilted and overturned cars and hurried back to the Greenwich station.

A call was sent throughout the city for physicians, and ambulances were summoned from the Greenwich Hospital and the Greenwich General Hospital. Drs. Griswold, Klein, Brooks, Platts and Clark were among the first to respond. They aided in the work of rescuing the passengers who had been unable to effect their own escape and bound up the wounds of those waiting for the ambulances.

Engineer Kendall Arrested.

Fully a score were in need of medical and surgical aid, and many more had minor cuts and bruises, due to broken glass and being bumped around in the jolting cars, which they cared for themselves.

Chief of Police Roach had a force of men quickly on the scene and after an investigation placed Engineer Kendall under arrest. He was taken to police headquarters and held until the coroner could have time to get on the death of Miss Armstrong. Meanwhile the injured were being rushed to the two hospitals.

The wrecked cars were so badly damaged that those or four of them are at once beyond repair.

There have been several fires on the bridge lately and it is thought that this may have weakened the rails and thus caused the spreading. The injured woodwork on the bridge, which is a steel structure, had been temporarily replaced, but permanent repairs had not been effected.

To the terrible panic in the cars passengers threw away valuables and paid no attention to hats, coats or luggage in their flight to get out.

Every one feared that the cars would telescope and pile up in a heap, and this must have happened had not the two electric and the forward two cars broken loose and run on ahead.

The train was made up of nine coaches, of which five were Pullman cars. Outside of derailment, the day coaches suffered practically no harm, while the Pullmans were all turned over.

Miss Armstrong, who was killed, was the daughter of the late Dr. William C. Armstrong of Wayne, Pa. She was just twenty years old. Her body and was gradually lifted from Miss Wright's seat at 2 o'clock this afternoon. With her mother she was on her way to Lake Sunapee, N. H.

BIG JUDGMENT AGAINST HUB BANKING FIRM

Judge Lowell, in the United States District Court to-day, found for Elliot Norton, assignee of Francis A. Sawyer, against E. L. Gay & Company, bankers of No. 27 Congress street, Boston, and assessed damages at $181,945. Sawyer was former president of the Pittsburg, Binghamton & Eastern Railway, and alleged that the Boston bankers failed to fulfill their contract with him.

Pier House Wrecked at Mystic Docks When Blast of Fireworks Hurls Men to Death and Fires Structure.

Two men were killed instantly, one died at the Relief Hospital, another is probably fatally injured, while a fifth was hurt to-day in an explosion of fulminating caps in Pier 47, Mystic Docks, Charlestown. The locker was a complete wreck and the freight shed damaged, taking fire after the explosion.

The dead:

Nickerson, Zeba H., of Lynn; member Lodge No. 267, Odd Fellows, East Lynn; opener and packer for the custom house.

Mason, Thomas, of No. 32 Pearl street, Beachmont; for sixteen years watchman for the Boston & Maine at the freight pier.

Atwood, Charles F., of Dorchester, with Summer home at Hough's Neck; customs inspector, brother of former Congressman Harrison H. Atwood.

Probably fatally injured.

Sylvester, J. Albert, of Malden; foreman of freight house.

Dangerously injured:

Swanson, Charles, of No. 140 Paris street, East Boston; longshoreman.

INSTANT DEATH FOR TWO.

The explosion happened at 10:10 o'clock in a manner not entirely explained, and it may never be, for the men actually engaged in examining the two boxes of caps which had arrived on the steamer Barcelona from Hamburg were both instantly killed.

It is believed, however, that it was caused when one of the customs officers started to open one of the boxes with a chisel.

The customs officials were in the locker right near the entrance to Pier 47. It is a partitioned space forty by twenty feet. There the goods had been placed several days ago when the consignee, a Chicago firm, refused to accept them. The government officials were ordered to the pier to-day to inspect the packages as the shippers were about to offer the goods for sale.

Atwood was making the examination and Nickerson was opening the packages when a tremendous explosion took place. The locker was blown away and the part of the freight shed adjoining was badly damaged.

Atwood was blown clear across the inclosure, one arm being torn from its socket. Nickerson's body was badly mangled, while Mason was blown violently against a wall and crushed by flying timbers.

CLOTHING TORN FROM BODIES.

So great was the force of the explosion that the clothing was torn from the bodies of the men. Sylvester may die. It is certain he will lose one eye. His face is terribly lacerated and he received internal injuries.

The explosion ripped a hole fifteen feet square in the floor of the freight shed where the locker stood.

A horse belonging to William Emerson of No. 190 Athens street, South Boston, was so badly hurt that Policeman Allen of Station 15 shot the animal. For a time it was thought that John McCarthy, a Boston & Maine steamfitter, had been killed, but he escaped narrowly. Hundreds of others had narrow escapes. Perhaps none more close than that of John T. Somers of No. 60 Hamilton street, Dorchester, chief of the freight checkers. He was right in the midst of the explosion. He says:

"Together with John A. Reardon, chief clerk of the Hamburg-American line, and William Nudd, I was standing within ten feet of the locker in which the fireworks were being examined. First, I felt the wharf tremble, then I was covered with falling glass, and then came the explosion. I was lifted off my feet. I seemed to be in a regular coffee. First, I struck the side of a freight car, then the shed. I was whirling around, perfectly helpless.

"And you can see that I am no light weight," Mr. Somers weighs about 250 pounds.

"When I recovered myself I looked around and saw Nudd lying on the ground. I at first thought that he was badly injured, but it turns out that he simply suffered a nervous shock. However, he was so unnerving that he had to be sent home.

FIRE QUICKLY PUT OUT.

"Reardon and myself assisted Nudd out of danger and then we ran back and got the fire hose working. The fire system worked perfectly and inside of two minutes we had water on the fire.

"If they had had such a perfect system as that in East Boston the Cunard and Leyland line docks would now be standing."

Collector of the Port George H. Lyman was early on the scene. He was much affected at the loss of his son, and could not account for the accident. He said the Custom House would depend upon the police investigation and assist the officers as much as possible.

Dangerous as the freight shed were busily engaged in searching the pockets of the clothing blown from the killed and injured men when they were driven away by policemen of station 15.

Atwood, who is forty years of age, and who died at the Relief Hospital, was an examiner in the appraiser's office. He was a widower, and is survived by one son, his brother, former Congressman Atwood, was notified of the accident.

SON IDENTIFIES FATHER.

The body of Thomas Mason, the watchman, sixty-three years of age, was identified by his son, George A., twenty-three years of age. Mason, who lives at No. 32 Pearl street, Beachmont, is the father of six children. George is the oldest, while Elmer B. is a baby of six months. The widow also survives. The other children are: Annie, eighteen; Mary, fifteen; Henry, twelve, and Thomas, eleven.

The explosion is said to be very similar in character to that which killed one man and hurt several recently on the steamer Arcadian in Philadelphia.

PITTSBURG, Pa., July 16.—The Dorets tried hard to obtain revenge to-day for the defeat they suffered yesterday at the hands of the Pirates. President George Dovey was the most pleased with the day's game ended, and so expressed himself afterward.

"Tough luck, Major," said a fan as he left the stand. "Tough luck, nothing," was Dovey's bitter reply. "I would much rather have had Fred Clarke smash the ball over the fence than to have the game given as it did."

Kelley's men were not discouraged, and Harley Young wanted to oppose his former mates in the game. Camnitz was chosen for the Innocents.

To-morrow is to be celebrated here as "Wagner day," the fans having arranged with the banker to "Honus, the Flying Dutchman."

More than 4000 has been raised by popular subscription, no contribution amounting to over $1. With this money a handsome watch has been purchased, and before to-morrow's game Director of Public Safety Lange will present the gift.

The Doves will benefit by the occasion, for it is expected that a large number of fans will turn out to do honor to the big Carnegie citizen.

BY DYKE CLARK.

HUNTINGTON AVENUE GROUNDS, Boston, July 16.—The White Sox got a big greeting on their second appearance of the season to scramble in a few games with the Red Sox. The Windy City lads were always great favorites in the Hub, and all the more so now with several members of the past nines which defended the local colors in their midst.

Fielder Jones's men were feeling in prime shape after getting the better of the Senators and the Athletics, but were rather set at having the Naps shake them down into fourth position, and the leader said all over the field the last time he pitched that he would have the places reversed before he got through with the present series.

The visitors couldn't see where the Red Sox had anything on them, as they already had five out of the seven games played stowed away, but did not realize that Jennon McGuire's men were playing a higher grade of diamond stuff than when the two teams last met.

The Red Sox had played both Detroit and Cleveland to a standstill, and the home fans could not figure it out where the White Sox fitted to get any more than the teams ahead of them.

Freddy Parent, the old Hub favorite, was more chipper than ever and was a big improvement over his previous appearance with the White Sox.

The fans gazed on the Westerners in amusement as they knew that they were the weakest hitting team in the league, many points below the home bunch, yet counted as pennant winners. It was a question whether they could get away with a lick of hitting while they sparred with the Puritanical crowd.

It was a fine array of pitching talent that the Lakeside team presented with Ed Walsh, Doc White, Owen and Altrock. It was Altrock's turn to work in the box, and the veteran southpaw wanted to go in and get revenge for being knocked all over the field the last time he pitched before him.

HAZEL DREW LETTERS BARE ELOPEMENT PLAN

VICTIM OF STRANGE TRAGEDY WAS RECENTLY IN HUB; POLICE HUNT SLAYER.

Hazel Drew, the pretty girl who was murdered and whose body was cast into Teal Pond, near Troy, N. Y., was recently in Boston, where police are now searching for her slayer.

That she had recently been in this city was revealed in the letters found in her dress-suit case. She had been in Boston three days and in Providence three days.

The letters also show that she intended to elope with a man well known in Boston and New York.

But the police will give no hint as to his identity. It is said that they obtained their clew from the letters. They were known to have been found, but until today no hint of what they revealed of the girl's heart secret was made public.

Why the elopement did not happen, and what became of the man she was to run away with, are what the detectives sought to learn to-day. It had been intimately acquainted with her for six or eight months.

Believe Arrest Near.

The suit case was checked at the railroad station in Troy by the unfortunate girl on the morning of the last day of her life. It was found by County Detective Dennis Kane in it were found half a dozen letters to the girl from a man.

The search has now extended from Boston to Chattanooga. An arrest is expected to be made at any time.

According to a dispatch from the BOSTON AMERICAN correspondent at Troy to-day, the police hope, within twenty-four hours, to be in possession of the man who slew Hazel Drew and threw her body into Teal Pond on July 7, after maltreating the girl. Local developments have followed one another so close since yesterday noon that the local authorities hope to have him under lock and key during the day.

While search is being made in Boston and elsewhere the police say it is practically certain that the man who killed the young governess is in the immediate vicinity of Troy, possibly within a mile of where the girl's body was found.

Her Suit Case Found.

The latest important developments of today include the finding of the girl's suit case at the Union station in Troy, where Hazel Drew checked it a week ago Tuesday at 1:40 p. m. This dispels the theory that the girl went to Averhill Park or was anywhere near the home of her uncle, William Taylor, until late Tuesday afternoon, when she was recognized on the road by Frank Smith and Rodolph Gunderman.

It became known to-day that the letters found in the trunk removed from the Cary home to the Drew home July 7 supply evidence upon which the District Attorney is working to locate the person who may have been Hazel Drew's companion on certain strange trips. District Attorney O'Brien to-day admitted that there were letters from Boston, New York and Providence.

It was also discovered by an AMERICAN reporter that Hazel Drew's life was insured in the Metropolitan Insurance Company for $200.

Mrs. John Drew, Hazel's mother, put in a claim for the money within two hours after the body had been identified by her father. Certificate of loss has been forwarded to the New York office, without recommendation.

A Mysterious Personal.

But aside from the web of evidence that is constantly accumulating around Frank Smith, the half-witted farmer lad, and Conman William Tyler, by far the most important clew is believed by District Attorney Jarvis P. O'Brien to be contained in a newspaper "personal" item found in Hazel Drew's pocketbook in the suit case. The advertisement, which the girl evidently had preserved with great care, reads as follows:

"Edward Lavoie has departed for Chattanooga, Tenn., where he will remain for the Winter."

When District Attorney O'Brien was asked to-day at Troy if anything was known as to the whereabouts of the Edward Lavoie referred to, he declined to answer.

"All that I will state about arrests now is that I expect my men to accomplish in that direction before to-night," he said the District Attorney. "I have worked all night myself, and my men did likewise. There will be no let up until the person or persons responsible for Hazel Drew's death are behind the prison bars."

The heart-broken mother was weeping to-day because she was helpless to aid in the search for the slayer. The attitude of Minnie Taylor, the aunt, with whom Hazel went to Schenectady from Troy to spend July Fourth, is much the same as that of Taylor, who lives on the farm near Teal Pond.

Miss Taylor is believed to know much about Hazel's movements, and about the girl's friends, whose names no one else can tell. To-day Miss Taylor, questioned by District Attorney O'Brien as to these friends, declined to answer.

The District Attorney, after being told by the AMERICAN reporter of an interview with Mrs. Cary, decided to re-examine Miss Taylor, but she was not found. Mrs. Cary, the wife of Professor E. R. Cary of Troy, to-day, in the first interview given to any newspaper, told the circumstances of Hazel Drew's departure from her home.

"Hazel left so voluntarily," Mrs. Cary said. "Monday morning, July 6, she came to me and said she was going away. She offered no explanation. I loved the girl dearly, but refrained from asking questions, as I had noticed for several months that Hazel had lost interest in the home and all tried to make pleasant for her.

"She was a good girl, and I cannot believe now that she ever took a wrong step of her own accord. She left two days at home early, and, in fact, seldom went out at night. She preferred to stay home and read rather than go out and frolic with young men and women of her age."

The change in Hazel Drew's general demeanor, indicating that something was influence and come to bear on her life, was noticed about six months ago, according to Miss Cary.

Hazel Drew Came to Her Death Mainly Because She Was a Girl

By Lilian Bell.

In the clever Locke play called "The Morals of Marcus," in which pretty Mariette Dore starred last season, the little Turkish girl repeats after Sir Marcus, "Sweet Sea. What is sex?" to which Sir Marcus answers, "Sex is the fundamental blunder of creation."

This struck me as being so profound a truth that it was the first thought which leaped into my brain when I read that there was no clew as yet to the murder of poor little Hazel Drew.

Slain Because She Was a Girl.

There is that clew. The girl was undoubtedly slain by some man, and slain because she was a girl. The motive for deciding which particular man killed her is simply a matter for the law to discover, and concerns that man alone. He will have to pay the penalty just as surely as the cowardly wretch, Chester Gillette, paid for putting poor, trusting, loyal Grace Brown out of his way when her love and plight became troublesome.

As for the public, we know the main point, and that is that another pretty girl has paid the penalty of being too attractive to men. But in that region of the country if it should be proved that she was attacked by the charcoal burners and murdered to conceal an assault, it would itself once more into the primitive problem of sex, and it will require but the simple fact that Hazel Drew met her death simply because she was a woman instead of a man.

A man is safe enough on a lonely road, in darkness or daylight. The only risk he runs is from the murderous highwayman. Therefore the man who can put up a good fight is practically safe.

But is a woman?

Is No Woman Safe if Left Alone?

In the Far West, mothers tell me that they never dare leave their little girls alone in the house with a Mongolian man servant, no matter how faithful and apparently harmless he may seem to be.

In the South farmers' wives and daughters by petatoes will be murdered on a tiresome lane fastened by a rope to their belts, while even in cities women are not safe except in broad daylight.

LILIAN BELL.

Is America becoming a country where no defenceless woman is safe from a murderous attack by some lurking brute of a man?

Is a woman's life becoming a menace in this land, which is supposed to guarantee women to the utmost of becoming a precedent to other nations?

Let Women Devise Something.

It certainly seems to me either that the press should refrain from giving current attaches itself to a murder in which sex for motive, or else that our country is growing worse along this line so rapidly that it behooves us to take the subject under serious consideration.

Legislation could do much. There are very much worse punishments to my mind than a painless death by electricity.

Let something be devised by the women themselves. They would not be long in stamping out this frightful evil.

But will our women so fearless and in spite of heritage so poorly protected by their natural protectors, the men of their family, this particular crime often goes free of any punishment whatever, because of the disgrace which attaches itself to even the suspicion that the girl or woman had been assaulted.

Our District Attorneys all over the country will tell you how difficult it is to get young girls to testify in court to ill treatment at the hands of prominent men whose money has bought their perjury, for it is no easy to buy a poor girl's silence on what she is ashamed to tell anyway.

And it is this woman's pride and her shame in confessing which many men depend upon. They know that only under torture will many women confess that their dearest possession, their honor, has been wrested from them.

Fear of Confession Leads to Tragedy.

It is this fear of the woman's confessing that leads to many a murder, and in the case of Hazel Drew the evidence seems to point to the fact that she repelled evil advances and fought to preserve her honor.

Men must have a natural hatred of murder—of the taking away of a human life—and only because the woman was overpowered or driven to desperation by the delight that she was in danger of a hysterical confession in order to escape the final refuge for her supreme ordeal, does her betrayer slay her in cold blood.

Such a deduction from Hazel Drew's tragic death in the dark waters of Big Moose Lake.

It remains to be seen yet whether Hazel Drew would have had a similar sad story to tell, or whether she was murdered because of a struggle for her honor and all that life holds dear.

But one fact stands out like a mountain peak.

Hazel Drew undoubtedly came to her death mainly because she was a woman.

Think of it, you fathers with daughters and good men with sisters! Would a similar fate have hung over your dear ones' heads had they been in poor Hazel Drew's place?

2,000 BOYS CARRY MESSAGE 1,000 MILES

ITHACA, N. Y., July 15.—Early this morning the message that two thousand boys are carrying by relays from Mayor McClellan of New York to Mayor Busse of Chicago arrived in this city and was quickly hurried on its way across Cayuga Lake by boys in boats. The boats were stationed at half-mile intervals across the water, and as one boy reached the boat nearest to him he gave the silver tube in which the message is to the occupant. In this way the lake was crossed.

The message is now well ahead of the schedule laid out for it. The entire distance that it will be carried is 1,000 miles. This novel race by boys was started at 10 o'clock yesterday morning when Herbert H. Happ, the first runner, sprinted away from the steps of City Hall with the silver tube in his hand. In the tube was the following message:

"To the city of Chicago: The city of New York sends greetings by the fleet runners of the Young Men's Christian Association. This message is borne on foot, without a halt from the Atlantic to Lake Michigan, and the hundreds of boys who carry it gain no prize except the consciousness of having done their best."

May Beat Schedule.

According to the schedule the message should arrive in Chicago and be placed in the hands of Mayor Busse on Tuesday, July 21. It looks now, however, as if the message would arrive there before that time. The message reached Yonkers at just before 7 o'clock this morning. It left White Plains at 5 o'clock yesterday morning and reached Port Chester at 11:30 o'clock. The entire distance from White Plains to Port Chester is 18 miles. This next race by boys was started at 1:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon when Herbert H. Happ, the first runner, sprinted away from the steps of City Hall with the silver tube in his hand. In the tube was the following message:

"To the city of Chicago: The city of New York sends greetings by the fleet runners of the Young Men's Christian Association. This message is borne on foot, without a halt from the Atlantic to Lake Michigan, and the hundreds of boys who carry it gain no prize except the consciousness of having done their best."

CONRY AFTER KELIHER'S SEAT IN CONGRESS

Joseph A. Conry, former Congressman, chairman of the Board of Aldermen and member of the Common Council, announces that he is a candidate for Congress from the Sixth District in the coming election. The present representative in John A. Keliher, who has served three terms.

Conry represented the district in the National House for one term. He ran as an independent against Keliher, after being defeated for renomination, and tried to defeat the latter when he was up at the polls by a close margin. Conry lives in South Boston, in his announcement of his candidacy he says:

"The present incumbent has not indicated whether he will or will not be a candidate for a fourth term. A strong feeling prevails in this district that three terms in Congress affords a man a good opportunity to distinguish himself and that no man would be warranted in asking for a fourth term unless his service in Washington was to the highest degree necessary for the welfare of the district. I find on the canvass of the district fills to show that there is no such general call at this time to change the three-term custom."

Conry says he accepts the Denver platform and is for Bryan and Kern.

FINED FOR SCORCHING.

Fuller Tilton, a wealthy resident of Suffolk road, Newton, was fined $10 for overspeeding in automobile by Judge Parmenter in the Municipal Court to-day.

BAY STATE GAS RECEIVERSHIP TERMINATED

The long-drawn-out wrangle in the affairs of the Bay State Gas Company was brought to an end to-day when Judge Lurton Sanford Circuit Court issued a decree discharging George Wharton Pepper as receiver for the company and dissolving all injunctions heretofore issued against the company or its officers.

The decree further orders that all pressing claims in dispute, mostly for legal fees, and amounting to about $50,000, be paid out of the $217,000 now in the hands of the receiver. The rest of the fund is ordered to be turned over to the company.

BIG REALTY TRANSFER IN TREMONT ROW

The enormous advance made in the value of real estate in Boston in the past sixty years is startlingly shown in the prices brought in the sale of the property Nos. 17, 18, 19, 20, 21 and 22 Tremont row, the first important realty transfer in Scollay square since the takings for the subway entrance and exits.

It is understood that the price paid was considerably in excess of $500,000 for the property, consisting of 5,676 square feet, fronting eighty feet in Tremont, in 1843 three of these same lots were sold for $14,000, showing the unparalleled increase of downtown valuations since that period.

The deal was made by Jason S. Bailey, proprietor of the Boston Dime Museum, who was the owner of the property. He bought it from Dr. Mary M. Codman, Jr., Henry Parkman, Nathaniel Thayer and Moses Williams, Jr., trustees of the Mumford Real Estate Trust, who buy subject to existing leases.

There are four three and one-half story brick buildings on the land. The assessed value of the property is $480,000, the land being taxed for $466,800 and the buildings for $225,200. Curtis & Tilney, brokers, of the Penn Mutual Building, negotiated the deal.

Mr. Bailey has owned this land for almost ten years and conducted the Boston Department Store there for some eight or nine years. He has removed the business to Washington street.

AUTO SPEEDERS FINED AT DEDHAM

For exceeding the speed limit for autos, Thomas F. Winn of Chicago, Elisha Bragg of Franklin and Frank Duplus of Pawtucket, R. I., were to-day fined $15 each by Judge Grover in the Dedham District Court. Harney Doherty, a Pawtucket auto'st, pleaded nolo, and his case was placed on file.

OPENS FIGHT TO BREAK WILL OF $2,000,000

NEW YORK, July 16.—Donald Harper, an American attorney practicing in Paris, arrived here to-day on the White Star liner Majestic and went immediately to his New York home, No. 20 Broad street, to make preparations to break the will of Benjamin Hart, the American millionaire who died last May in Paris, disinheriting his adopted daughter and his alleged illegal wife and leaving the $2,000,000 to a Frenchwoman, Madame de Bie.

The will contest will be made on July 30 in the Surrogate's Court, and it promises to develop a three-cornered fight for the dead man's millions that is likely to prove as sensational as anything in its kind in the recent history of the New York courts.

Donald Harper is the counsel for the adopted daughter, Mme. Jeanne de Guilmin, wife of the counsellor of the French Embassy at Vienna, and formerly a special envoy to the United States. Mme. de Guilmin is a sister-in-law of the Countess of Montebello.

WEST BOYLSTON IS 100 YEARS OLD

WEST BOYLSTON, July 16.—The principal ceremonies in observance of the centennial anniversary of the incorporation of this town took place to-day. The main exercises were held in the Town Hall, former Attorney-General Herbert Parker and Mayor James Logan of Worcester being the principal speakers. The program also included various sporting events, a cooking parade, luncheon on the Common and a band concert and bonfire in the evening.

PINED FOR LOVE OF HUSBAND; TRIES SUICIDE

Despondent Woman Saved After Drinking Sulpho-Napthol.

Mrs. Beatrice Shugrue, of No. 14 Mills street, Roxbury, 28 years old, and attractive and the mother of four small children, is recovering this afternoon at the City Hospital from the effects of a dose of sulpho-napthol, taken during the morning with suicidal intent, because she thought her husband was losing his love for her.

In the kitchen of her home, at 8:30 a. m., in the presence of eighteen-year-old Daisy Leeman of Woburn, the family housekeeper, Mrs. Shugrue raised the phial of poison to her lips and exclaimed:

"Well, Daisy, this ends it!"

She swallowed half the contents and then ran up stairs and lay down upon her bed to die. Dr. Charles Green, of Warren street, who summoned hurriedly, had her removed to the hospital just in time to save her life. For several hours the young woman was unconscious, but she revived, and this afternoon is on the road to recovery.

Mrs. Shugrue is the wife of Charles J. Shugrue, a wallpaper dealer in Warren street. They are both about ten same age. Their married life, neighbors say, was always happy, but, according to Miss Leeman, the young wife had worried because her husband for several weeks had been mailed away from home.

"She sent me to his store to-day to ask him to come to her," said Miss Leeman. "I went there and told him what she said, but he only laughed. I guess he thought he was being jollied. When I returned and told Mrs. Shugrue, she went immediately and got the poison, and after drinking it she went upstairs.

Shugrue returned home shortly afterward, but would not talk. "She was despondent, that's all," he said to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter.

OPPOSE LOAN FOR CEMETERY

The Finance Commission to-day advised the Mayor and City Council against the proposed borrowing of $40,000 by the city for enlarging Evergreen Cemetery and $6,000 for building a new chapel and fence at Dorchester North Burying Ground. The Commission bases its objection to the purchase of land to enlarge the cemetery on sanitary reasons, as the land is untitled for cemetery purposes.

The Finance Commission also advises that the money received from the sale of cemetery lots be applied to the paying off of the debt created by the original purchase of cemetery lands.

KILLED TRYING TO SAVE WOMAN

CHICAGO, July 16.—Raymond N. Gurley, thirty-one years old, a cattle buyer, was shot and instantly killed while making a chivalrous attempt to take the part of a woman in a quarrel early to-day. Charles Pretschold, an awning manufacturer, was the assailant. He is held by the police.

FIND CLUBMAN DEAD; PISTOL IN HIS GRASP

William E. Silsbee, Harvard Graduate, Dies in Huntington Avenue Room.

William E. Silsbee, sixty-three years of age, single, a graduate of Harvard and descended from an old Salem family, was found dead in his room, No. 78 Huntington avenue, at noon to-day, a bullet hole in his left temple and a 38-calibre army revolver grasped in his right hand. Medical Examiner MacDonald was notified.

Friends are at a loss to assign a cause for the deed. Mr. Silsbee, it is true, had appeared somewhat despondent of late, but no real cause for his taking his life is known.

Mr. Silsbee was a member of the Boston Athletic Association, the Eastern Yacht Club and the Tennis and Racket Club. He formerly belonged to the Somerset Club.

SUES CHIEF ON FALSE ARREST

Chief of Police Fred S. Sackett of Norwood was served to-day with a writ by Deputy Sheriff William A Wigg of Hyde Park, in a suit for $10,000 in an action of tort, brought by Thomas A. Foster of Providence. Foster alleges false arrest by Chief Sackett on the charge of overspeeding in Norwood on June 22. Foster complained to the City Government and after a hearing they upheld Chief Sackett.

MOB ATTACKS POLICE OFFICER

The Hyde Park police are to-day looking for ringleaders in a mob of 200 who last night assaulted Special Officer Michael J. Maguire when he tried to arrest two of their number, who were fighting. The patrolman's assailants are thought to belong in Mattapan.

The assault took place at 10:30 o'clock, when a crowd of about 1,000 persons was leaving an open-air band concert in Hyde Park. Two hundred persons went into River street toward Mattapan. A fight started between two of the number. When Maguire seized both, the rest of the crowd leaped upon him, tied his legs with a rope and beat him mercilessly.

ALICE HAS QUIT SMOKING, SAY SOCIETY FOLK

President's Daughter No Longer Indulges in Cigarettes, They Say.

DENVER, July 16.—"Mrs. Longworth was formerly an inveterate user of tobacco; she has not, though, for some time touched a cigarette," said Mrs. Crawford Hill, a social leader here. She declared she did not understand why the invitation to attend the Presidential Convention should be recalled at this date, when Mrs. Longworth has tabooed cigarettes altogether.

"Of course Mrs. Longworth did not smoke in Denver last week," said Mrs. Hill. "She doesn't smoke any place nowadays. Of course, she used to be notoriously fond of tobacco and was constantly seen to smoke. It was no secret. But when she made up her mind to stop it she was strong enough to get along without it."

"If Mrs. Longworth sees a real smoker," said Miss Katherine Symes, who gave a dinner for the President's daughter, "she would certainly want her cigarette after dinner. I know she did not smoke after any dinner, and I was present at all the functions where she was entertained last week and never saw her smoke. It is ridiculous. She has a right to smoke if she wishes, and would certainly not hurt herself in the esteem of her friends. But I am sure she does not, and this is an error of judgment by the prohibitionists."

BRAND SMILES AND WHY NOT?

Alderman Frederick J. Brand of Dorchester is to-day wearing one of those smiles "that won't come off." There's reason for it, too, because Brand was the only man in the Board of Aldermen who fought the application of the Union Freight Railroad Company, controlled by the New York, New Haven & Hartford, for permission to lay tracks across the new Northern avenue bridge. The company lost after the publicity given the grab in the AMERICAN. Brand, therefore, figures that he has been up with the game in Boston and can grab by one of New England's largest corporations.

So why shouldn't Brand smile?

Mrs. Bradley! Doesn't the very mention of the name of this woman, who a few months ago was the centre of a real tragedy of murder, cause you to wonder what has become of her? She is living another tragedy now, and it will be all told about in next Sunday's BOSTON AMERICAN.

DETECTIVES IN HUB SEEK CLEW IN POISON CASE

Philadelphia Sleuths Want Further Light Mailed From This City.

TAKE UP CHICAGO TRAIL

To hunt down in Boston a man suspected of sending the bottle of poisoned ale which killed Dr. William H. Wilson, a Philadelphia detective is now on the way to this city. The Philadelphia authorities say that they believe that the man wanted may be in Chicago, and have sent another detective there. But they do not explain why a search for him is to be made in Boston.

A letter came to the authorities in Philadelphia, where the physician lived and died, stating that a man answering the description of the person suspected of sending the poison had been seen at the Back Bay station. The letter signed "Outraged Husband," and supplied to explain a motive for the strange murder, was mailed at the Back Bay postoffice in this city.

In Philadelphia the police admit that the man answering the description of the suspect in the case supplied for work for a Chicago printer. Police Superintendent Taylor received of this by a letter from Chicago. Dr. Wilson died after taking a sealed bottle of ale which he had bought at the close of the baseball game on May 30.

The police believed, after investigating the case, that the murderer who sent the ale might have been a man whose husband's wife died after an operation for which the husband blamed the dead physician.

DR. CAHILL HELD FOR GRAND JURY IN $2,000 BAIL

Dr. George S. Cahill of No. 2062 Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge, was held in $2,000 for the Grand Jury on charges made by seventeen-year-old Ernestine Gourd of No. 275 Riverside avenue, Medford. The case was heard in the Third District Court, Cambridge, today, by Assistant District Attorney Arthur Stone. Dorice, nineteen years old, of No. 2062 Rindge avenue, Cambridge, was held in $1,000 for the Grand Jury on the charge of being an accessory. Dorice was bailed by his father, but Dr. Cahill was not able to obtain bail.

Two witnesses were heard. Miss Gourd and Dr. Henry C. Hashie of No. 432 Broadway, Somerville.

MRS. EDDY 87 TO-DAY, ACTIVE AT HER WORK

Eighty-seven years ago to-day Rev. Mary Baker G. Eddy was born. To-day there are no special remembrances of the day at the home of the founder of Christian Science in Chestnut Hill, for there are no birthdays among Christian Scientists.

To-day with Mrs. Eddy is being spent like every other day. She is methodical in the extreme. She rises at 6, breakfasts at 7 and spends the early morning hours reading the Bible or histories of religion. She dines invariably at noon and sups at 6 o'clock in the evening.

It has been her custom for years to take her drive of a half hour at 1:30 in the afternoon, and since she has removed to Chestnut Hill from Concord she has missed these drives but twice. After driving Mrs. Eddy busies herself for hours answering her voluminous correspondence and writing. In her pleasant study, with its spacious bay window, she sits upon a writing desk and dictates to her two secretaries.

Mrs. Eddy is a regular contributor to the Christian Science Journals. Recently she has written no long tracts, but her latest articles are long declared that "No Christian scientist shall endeavor to monopolize the healing work in any church or locality to the exclusion of others."

"Stop that spooning on the beach!" says the Mayor of Atlantic City, and if you want to know all about the consternation that simple command caused, read next Sunday's BOSTON AMERICAN.

DESERTED WIFE LOYAL TO SAXE, WHO ENDS LIFE

WOLLASTON WOMAN MOURNS FOR MAN WHO DIED WITH "AFFINITY."

In mourning dress for the husband who deserted her seven years ago, Mrs. Alice Saxe, young and beautiful, is in seclusion at her home in Wollaston to-day, silently grieving over the tragic suicide in Tampa, Fla., of Ralph Jacob Saxe, the former dapper young man with whom she was united in marriage in Wollaston but a short time before she was abandoned.

Faithful to him to the very end, it was Mrs. Saxe who inserted a notice of her husband's death in a Boston newspaper after word of his suicide had been received. Her mother, Mrs. Prescott, lives at No. 255 Farrington street, Wollaston, said when questioned to-day:

Not Heard From for Long Time.

"Why should Alice talk? There is absolutely nothing for her to say."

Ralph Saxe came of an old and respected Medford family and for many years was a travelling salesman for a Boston shoe concern. His territory was through the South. He lost his position and afterward, former friends said to-day, started on a fast career. He left his wife and removed to Tampa, where he was soon often in the company of a woman whom many supposed was Mrs. Saxe.

For a long time he had not been heard from in Boston or Medford. It was reported several times that he was dead. Mrs. Saxe, for a year and a half, has been wearing mourning, and neighbors presumed that she had at last reconciled herself to the belief that Saxe had passed away.

Buried Side by Side.

News of the suicide came like a thunderbolt to the family and to the friends of both sides. Saxe, according to press dispatches, parted with the Southern woman several times, but only for brief periods.

On Tuesday afternoon, when the woman was in his apartments, Saxe took poison and died. The woman, known only as "Annie," following him in death a few hours afterwards. Both bodies were buried, side by side, in a Tampa cemetery.

QUICK LUNCH AND NEW SHOW AT WONDERLAND

Among the Wonderland improvements for this week are the new Quick Lunch Restaurant and the Marionette Show. The restaurant is to be under pork management, serving up to date lunches at popular prices. It has taken some weeks' study out the wants of hungry pork patrons, and a section of the big roller pavilion was set apart a week ago for the experiment. The Quick Lunch now has a success from the first day and is now being enlarged upon.

The Marionettes are mechanical dancing men and women, the biggest and most like in the world, secured for one week within a week at a great expense and are being installed in the vacant space between the Emergency Hospital and Paradise the Show Beautiful, where the opening performances will be given Saturday.

Another Wild West Ticket.

Dare-Devil Babcock will continue loop-the-loop and jump-the-gap performances in the open air all this week, and those who have not seen him should embrace this opportunity, for it is without doubt one of the greatest park features ever produced in any country.

His schedule is 5 in the afternoon and 10:30 in the evening and only rainstorms or weather will prevent him from appearing on time.

Sunday American Outing Club members and all with pleasure the news that next Sunday BOSTON AMERICAN readers will be the Pawnee Bill Wild West free ticket which entitles them to see the twenty-first cent Wild West production on Monday or Tuesday for ten cents.

Greatest Offer Ever Made.

The Wonderland coupon layout for Sunday will be the greatest ever given in our Summer park. On either day, by using the free tickets, one gains admission to the park, sees Darling's Pony Monkey ballet without cost, the Wonderland Band direction for ten cents, and rides on the Velvet Coaster, the Merry-Go-Round or the Miniature Railway at the rate of two rides for five cents.

In the free shows next week the Seven Grenadines, acrobats and tumblers, including six beautiful young ladies, and the Silvestro trio of balancers will surprise and please audiences with their high abilities.

KILLED BY SWITCHER.

Thomas Mulcreven, twenty-five years of age, living at No. 21 A street, South Boston, a Boston & Albany section hand, while walking on the tracks west of the Hunting-ton avenue bridge to-day was struck by a switching locomotive. Both of his legs were cut off, and he died while being removed to the Massachusetts General Hospital.

"This is the Coolest Store in Boston,"

Exclaimed a customer during one of the hottest of days. The thermometer was much higher than we wanted it, but this discerning lady no doubt was impressed with the fact that the air was fresher and the ventilation superior to that of business houses that the air was fresher and the ventilation superior to that of business houses that the air was fresher and the ventilation superior to that of the street, with establishments. Those who are familiar with our store well know that its situation, with its fresh-air avenue from Boston Common, through the cool marble corridor; with entrances and wide-open windows from 26 to 46 Winter street; windows and entrance on Temple place, and the whole side of our store on the East open to the refreshing ocean breezes from Temple place, and the whole side of our store on the East open to the refreshing ocean winds coming over the low buildings, almost unrestricted in this direction, and still further, we have the cool breezes from the areas back of St. Paul's church, reinforced from the Common by the prevailing southwest winds. To customers unfamiliar with this almost entire exposure of our building to the fresh air from without, we say, "Welcome from the hot streets to do your shopping in a well-ventilated and comfortable store at all times."

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.

WALTER SINCLAIR, a young business man from Cleveland, meets a woman of regal beauty in Boston. She gives her name as Madame Alvarez, and is mysterious and is pursued by enemies. She escapes them by promise to tell all. He gets a chauffeur named Dalton and a red automobile to help.

The woman is pursued by two men and a woman, who claim to be Dr. Malthus, proprietor of a sanitarium, and his assistants, Dr. Bennet and Miss Ferrati. Dr. Malthus says that Madame Alvarez is insane, that she escaped from his hospital and that proofs valued at $150,000 from a Back Bay family.

Madame Alvarez had secreted in Boston a trunk containing the jewelled box, after which she pretended to ship to Sweden, whither she really did not go, but to Portland, Me. She lost the package and went to Portland to find it. Sinclair and Dalton, in the red car, had followed her, and would tell nothing of the missing package.

Dr. Malthus impressed on Sinclair the story that the police were after Madame Alvarez, and that it was better that the falling plaster of the court be disclosed, and that her whereabouts be made known before she and himself were arrested.

Marion Marston, Sinclair's fiancee, frightened at Sinclair's secrecy from her, and at Dalton's being done up in a runaway, made a call on Madame Alvarez to learn the truth about his strange conduct. In the absence of the woman and a brief conversation with the chauffeur, Dalton, who had followed Marion to the house, made a call on Sinclair, and told him that the enemies of Madame Alvarez had discovered something at the foot of an elm on one side of a square.

Sinclair discovered the square and digging at the foot of a tree unearthed a lead box. Of a magnificent piece of jewelry it contained he found the inscription, "Verna, Queen of Malvesia. Return to Boston." He hurried to Boston to find Dr. Malthus.

Malthus drew a revolver on Sinclair, but the latter was unexpected and was knocked down by the sudden appearance from another room of a man who proved to be Dalton, who had followed Sinclair to drag his weapon.

Malthus told Sinclair that Madame Alvarez was the legal heir to the throne of Malvesia, and that when she had found her country she took with her not only the crown jewels, but about all of the treasury. The package of real estate documents Malthus said, had caused him to chase Madame Alvarez.

CHAPTER XXVI.

AFTER luncheon Sinclair once more summoned the big red car which by this time had come to seem almost his own personal property.

It was an ideal day, and if smiling heavens and balmy air were good omens surely this quest would be successful.

As he walked down the steps of the hotel he met face to face the mysterious stranger to the gray rain coat and the tweed cap whose timely appearance in his room the night before had probably saved his life. Sinclair accosted him, although the man gave no sign of recognizing him.

"I want to thank you for what you did last night," he said, reaching out his hand. "I do not know by what freak of fate you happened upon the scene just at that time or what prompted you to come to my defence in such a generous fashion, but I am grateful just the same."

"You do not need to thank me," the man replied gravely. "What I did was a only part of my business—it was what I was paid to do."

"Mean Just What I Said."

"What you were paid to do," exclaimed Sinclair in astonishment. "I do not understand."

"I mean exactly what I said," came the reply. "I am a detective and I have been hired by friends of yours to shadow you. To speak frankly, I think the information in their possession concerning you should be kept under surveillance. I must do my duty, but I have also a duty to perform to you. Since it is on which you are engaged, but if it involves any more encounters like that of last night and you need my aid, you may be sure that I shall be close at hand."

With these words he turned on his heel and re-entered the hotel, leaving Sinclair uncertain whether he ought to be angry or amused at this unlooked-for move on Marion's part. The humor of his being shadowed like a criminal or a dangerous lunatic overcame his other feelings, and as he stepped into the red car he broke into a hearty laughter as he had not known since becoming involved in the mystery surrounding Madame Alvarez.

His amusement changed to sadness when he realized what tortures of anxiety Marion must be suffering on his account, and how cruel her heart must have been torn by his apparent cold refusal of her proffered aid and sympathy.

Man in Gray Rain Coat.

As the car sped down the street he prayed fervently that it would not be many hours before he could explain everything and clasp her once more to his heart as his future wife.

Looking back over his shoulder at the first turn in their route Sinclair was not surprised to see a small runabout following them. In it was the man in the gray rain coat and the tweed cap. Sinclair was not sorry, for now that he knew fully the desperate character of this man Malthus he felt that the detective whom Marion had engaged might very possibly prove a useful friend to have within call.

Sinclair brought the car to a halt frequently while he studied the translation of the cipher. According to the chauffeur there were at least five squares in Boston which corresponded to the spot where the cipher said the rosewood box would be found. The directions given as to the route to be taken to reach the spot from the Somerset were extremely minute, but owing to the fact that they designated few streets by name great confusion was necessary.

"Go two blocks in a northerly direction, then turn to your left until you come to a large granite building; at this point turn to your right along a broad avenue lined with handsome residences."

As a greater part of the directions were expressed in this rather vague manner, it was quite evident that a single wrong turn might lead them far astray.

"A Large Oval Plaza."

At length, after a ride of thirty minutes—which, so the chauffeur said, might have been reduced by half had it been possible for them to have disregarded the instructions and taken a direct route—they reached what the cipher described as a "large oval plaza, with water near, and from where, looking away from the water, you can see a big gilded dome."

Instantly Sinclair recognized it as the place where he and Madame Alvarez had left Dalton in the car on the memorable night of nights. Leaving the car he passed slowly down the street, noting as he went the landmarks which Madame Alvarez had called to his attention—the church on the corner, the old colonial house and the two magnificent trees.

He passed the street where they had stood in the arched gateway when the ruffian with the revolver approached. Then he continued on, as the instructions indicated, until he came "to a stone wall on the right hand side, shaded by many trees." Here he paused to make sure that he was not observed and consulted the instructions again.

"About 100 feet from the end of this wall," they read, "there is a small white beech tree and ten short paces beyond that you will find what you seek."

Close to Wall. Half Hidden.

Sinclair carefully measured off the paces. Close to the wall and half hidden by the grass and the branches of an overhanging vine he saw a place where the earth had been recently disturbed. The soil was sandy, and with his foot he easily penetrated it until he touched something hard. It was the work of only a few seconds to uncover the few inches of dirt which covered the rosewood box.

The first thing Sinclair noticed in the box was a small piece of paper, on which this was written:

"Search for other treasure."

Then the writing was partly obliterated. All that he could make out were these detached words:

"Berlin—summon—tree—$100—"

The writing was so defaced that he could not make out the sum of money exactly. It was at least $100, and there might have been another cipher written in it, but he could not tell.

Further down on the page, written on Hotel Somerset letter head, were these words:

"Search at another point on Commonnot in earth—not in water."

No sum of money was mentioned here.

There was something about a street and a monument with the name of one of the heroes of Bunker Hill. This detailed sentence closed the paper.

"There are churches of all nationalities."

Returning to the hotel with his precious charge as fast as the car could carry him, he found another note from Madame Alvarez. It had been brought, so the clerk said, by the same rough fellow who had twice before been the messenger.

"I have been removed," the note ran, "to the house of Malthus. I do not know where it is, but from the window of my front room on the second floor I can see across the street a two gate between two stone posts near which early this morning I saw Rose Ferrati burying a metal box containing things of great value to me. If you can in any way locate the house before midnight to-night, dig up this box and then try somehow, in the name of heaven, to get me out of this horrible place. I will answer you if I can when I hear three short whistles."

Madame Malthus in the house of mystery—but in her notes and flights distracted, doubtless, by that hideous old hag whom he so unpleasantly resembled! He shuddered to think of what terrible sufferings she might be undergoing.

More clews in to-morrow's instalment of the great mystery story. If the reader gets or fails to get any of the treasure to-day, be on the alert for to-morrow's instalment.

FOUR DAYS WITHOUT FOOD IN LABRADOR ICE FIELD

TWO DUXBURY FISHER MEN PICK THEIR WAY 140 MILES IN OPEN BOAT.

GLOUCESTER, July 16.—Four days and nights in an open boat without food or water, picking their way for 140 miles through icebergs and pack ice in zero weather, of the Labrador coast, was the experience of Joseph Mara and Edward Welsh, deep sea fishermen of the schooner Massachusetts of Duxbury, who arrived here to-day from Halifax, N. S.

Away up on the Labrador coast is their vessel, with their fellow-fishermen mourning them as lost.

The Massachusetts, in command of Captain John J. Carroll, fitted out here a month ago for a long trip to the north of the Grand Banks on a salt bank trip.

Lost in Fog Bank.

On June 20, when the schooner's crew was fishing 140 miles east of Labrador, in north latitude 53 degrees, Mara and Welsh were lost in a fog, the dorymen were hauling trawls when the fog shut down over the banks so thick that they could not see ten feet away. They finished hauling their trawls, and by that time the schooner had run on. They had heard no sound from their comrades in the other dories, as they were to windward of the line, and had not heard the horn of the schooner. The two men decided to set their sail and try to pull up the schooner. They were without food or water, but had a small sail and 4 oarsmen.

Throughout the night they cruised over the grounds, following a course by their compass, but got no trace of the vessel or the other dories.

The next morning broke clear, but there was no sign of a dory or a sail of any kind. Icebergs and pack ice covered sea and sky. The two men decided that there was no hope of finding their schooner and decided to start for Battle Harbor, which they considered the nearest point of land on the Labrador coast, a distance of 140 miles. It was thirty days. The men were their ordinary rough clothes and had no special protection from the arctic weather.

Suffered Bitter Cold.

They took turns at sailing their craft and rowing. They dared not sleep for fear the cold might overcome them. The rowing gave relief from the bitter cold and kept the hands so thick that they could not use ten feet away. They finished hauling their trawls, and by that time the schooner had run on. They had heard no sound from their comrades in the other dories, as they were to windward of the line, and had not heard the horn of the schooner. The two men decided to set their sail and try to pull up the schooner. They were without food or water, but had a small sail and 4 oarsmen.

PAVING BOSS HURT BY HORSE

William Condry, aged forty-five, of No. 15 Brook avenue, Roxbury, was knocked down by a horse driven by Michael Halloran on Dudley street, near Brook avenue, shortly before noon to-day.

He was picked up in an unconscious condition and taken to the City Hospital, where he is suffering contusions of the legs and a possible fracture of the skull. Mr. Condry is a foreman in the employ of the street paving division and is well-known in Roxbury.

After All, He Had to Go Ask Her Father!

By KENNETT HARRIS

THE young man with the plaid necktie was speaking in confidence to his most intimate friend. As he talked he hitched around nervously in his chair at the mere recollection of what he had been through.

"Maybe it wasn't decent?" he said, emphatically. "I couldn't see any sense in it anyhow. 'Why, Maude,' I told her, 'what's the use? Here I've been coming to see you for a year steady and if your father isn't on to the fact that I'm in love with you it's because his brain power is mighty small.' He doesn't object, for he'd have thrown me out before now if he didn't want me for a member of the family. I've asked you and that's enough.' Why should I go through the agony again?'

"But she shook her head and declared that wasn't the point. She said because she'd clerked in a dry goods store and her father worked in a foundry was no reason why her getting married wasn't as important as if she resided on the boulevard and I had to walk by six footmen when I came to call, instead of stepping through the front door right into the bosom of the family and finding pa in his shirt sleeves. She said the right sort of man always asked a girl's father if he might marry his daughter.

"So there was nothing for me to do but propose to father—and after I'd had a couple of months to get up courage enough to propose to Maude herself!"

"I should say that was tough!" sympathized his friend.

Didn't Know How

"I knew it was all off with me till I had spoken my little piece as per instructions," went on the young man with the plaid tie, "but I didn't know how to go at it. I felt foolish. It seemed just as silly to tell the old man I was going to marry his daughter as it would be to say, 'Good evening; you have two eyes and a nose.'

"The first time I tried it the whole family was there as usual and I hadn't connerved to get the laugh from the twins, aged twelve. Anyhow, in ten minutes her father got up and yawned and said he guessed he'd go to bed. Maude said that made no difference and that I'd have to go home. She said until her father consented it was no go. I guess she'd been reading an English novel. At any rate, she sent me home.

"The next night I found father buried in a newspaper.

"'Hello, Tom,' he says. 'Have you read this about the convention? You must! Here, take part of the paper!' And he shoved it into my hand.

"'Mr. Corcoran,' said I, and coughed.

"'Huh?' he said. 'I'll be through with this piece in just a minute. Look over that second column there!'

"I tried again and started in with a cough.

"'This wet weather is hard on one' said her father. 'Make yourself at home. Maude's run across the street and will be back soon. If she knows you're here I guess she might have stayed home, seems to me.'

"I've been coming a lot, you know,' I asked him.

"'Oh, that's all right,' he said, hearty like. 'You have to spend your time somewhere. Did you go to the baseball game?'

"'Mr. Corcoran,' I said firmly, 'you must know how I feel in regard to Maude.'

"'Sure I do,' he said, laying down the paper. 'You've got a head on you, myself. Come on down to the corner and I'll introduce you to a fellow that knows all the baseball stars. It's a meeting of the club and I'll steer you in. You can get back by the time Maude does.'

Refused to Fade

"Well, I went to the club and I stuck. I had to, because father did. I didn't intend to let him escape me that night. He blinked several times that I could run along to Maude, and I knew he wanted to play pinochle, but I refused to fade. At 11 o'clock we started away and he was groggy. I'd hate to think he was afraid of me.

"'Isn't this your corner,' he asked two blocks from his house.

"'I said it was, but I'd see him home.

"'Will a minute?' I cried when his hand was on the doorknob.

"He turned around real saraay. 'And you didn't have a thing to drink this evening, either?' he said, as if to himself. 'Watch the mutter with you, anyway? Why don't you go home? What are you hanging around me for? Don't you know your own address, or do you want to call on my front steps all night?'

"'I want to marry Maude!' I yelled in agony, with pink and red stars dancing in front of my eyes.

"'Well, what's that got to do with your keeping me up all night?' he snapped. 'Don't you suppose I knew it? Go home and get a good sleep—you certainly need quieer to-night, Tom.'

"Then he marched into the house and slammed the door, while I watched the pink and red stars dancing away and stopped my forehead. But I had asked him! It was over.

"'I'm going to pick out an orphan for mine,' said the young man's friend, determinedly.

MIRANDY ON LOVE AND LUCRE---By DOROTHY DIX

"Dere ain't no excitement for a rich man in tradin' hosses or automobiles. Hit gits on his nerves an' makes him peevish, ontel one day a bright idea strikes him, an' dat is dat he'll trade off his wife"

"WELL," says I, de odder night, when me an' Ike was a-settin' around real sociable to-gedder, wid our feet on de apron of de stove, an' little Teddy Rooseverfelt a-playin' on de fo' bedposts, "well, I sees dat snodder one of dem millionaires is gittin' a divorce."

"Humph,' 'scisims Ike, 'de way de rich indulges deirself's in luxuries sho'ly am scandalous."

"I wonder why hit is,' I pursues, 'dat de wealthy finds hit so hard to stay married to de same pusson? A po' man or woman manages to rock along pretty comfortable wid de same fifty partner, but de minnit a rich man or gittin matermonial troubles, an' de next news you hears deys done swapped off deir ole husband or wife for a new one.

"Now I can see whar de men what married women what was good cooks an' side-bodied workers, dat could help 'em in de days befo' dey struck it, feels lak dat dey needs to git a fresh start an' a younger real sizzly, to match deir new plush furniture when dey gits rich; but de millionaires dat marries female millionaires don't seem to be able to stay hitched nowises so better dan de odders dat got married befo' dey knowed dat dey was a-goin' to call 'em to be in de trust. Dat's de reason dat I say I don't looks lak dat money is a marriage booster.

Bone of Contention

"'An' dat's funny,' for hit does look lak to me dat ef a couple didn't have no call to scrap over de grocery bill an' de butcher bill, hit suttinly would remove de biggest bone of contention in de family skeleton.

"'Hit looks to me,' I goes on, a-castin' a mean'n glance at Mandy, 'dat de most moughty ca'm an' peaceable wid a man dat I didn't have to keep a eye on to see whedder he tampered wid his pay envelope on Saturday night 'fo' he turned hit over to me, an' who had so much money dat he didn't feel obleeged to git a allowance, or a pussonal character when I bought a spring bonnet dat he hadn't 'proved.'

"'Yas, Lawd,' spons Ike, 'bit looks lak to me dat ef a couple didn't have no call to be rent, dat I wouldn't let a little thing lak bein' married an' what I'd have to pay me home. She said until her father consented it was no go. I guess she'd been reading an English novel. At any rate, she sent me home.

"The next night I found father buried in a newspaper.

"'Hello, Tom,' he says. 'Have you read this about the convention? You must! Here, take part of the paper!' And he shoved it into my hand.

He blinked several times that I could run along to Maude, and I knew he wanted to play pinochle, but I refused to fade. At 11 o'clock we started away and he was groggy. "'Isn't this your corner,' he asked two blocks from his house.

"'I said it was, but I'd see him home.

"'Will a minute?' I cried when his hand was on the doorknob.

"He turned around real saraay. 'And you didn't have a thing to drink this evening, either?' he said, as if to himself. 'Watch the mutter with you, anyway? Why don't you go home? "'I want to marry Maude!' I yelled in agony, with pink and red stars dancing in front of my eyes.

"'Well, what's that got to do with your keeping me up all night?' he snapped. 'Don't you suppose I knew it? Go home and get a good sleep—you certainly need quieer to-night, Tom.'

"Then he marched into the house and slammed the door, while I watched the pink and red stars dancing away and stopped my forehead. But I had asked him! It was over.

"'I'm going to pick out an orphan for mine,' said the young man's friend, determinedly.

"Dey don't!" spons Ike, "but de differ-ence is dat de po' is so busy wrastlin' wid de problem of how dey gwine to git dey vittles dat dey ain't got de time to see whedder deir hearts palpitate at de approach of de one dat dey is fled to or not, whilst de rich ain't got nothin' else to do but set an' watch de state of deir affections an' see whether dey's at fever heat or is done dropped below normal.

"Now, des take ourselfs, Mirandy. I specks we was de las' to go projin' around one would find out dat our love's young to dream was snatched into matrimonee an' dat neider one of us has turned out to be de kind of a pusson dat we thought we was gittin' when we married.

"Me'self, I elder side of us was to be token wid a thrillin' feelin' when we happened to look at de odder one, we'd make sho' dat we had got a nice an' we'd soak our feet in hot mustard water an' take a dose of quinine an' go to bed.

May Be a Soulmate

"'Maybe, too, each one of us is gota real soulmate somewhar in de neighborhood, but, bein' po' an' havin' to scuffle to make de vittels meet, we ain't never had time to find none of dese things out, an' as we goes jogtin' along in de middle o' harness lak a good ole wuk horses we has fell into each odder's sides an' gits considder widout so much as kickin'.

"Now, ef we was rich, dis would all be different. When I'd come home of a night I wouldn't be hungry, an' you wouldn't be tired, so I'd git down on my knees by de hand an' a halo of good smellin' gravy surrounded me. No, sir! You would see dat you was gittin' ole an' fat.

"An' I wouldn't look to you lak de noble hero dat stood wid his good right arm between you an' de burnin' house. You'd see dat I'se got lump shouldered an' bandy legged a-totin' a hod an' kyore fetch.

"Den, havin' nothin' else to do, an' bein' sort of out of odder amusements, I'd set around an' git to wonderin' why we ever married each odder, an' den some dae day we'd start out on a hoss ride an' I'd git on den we'd pull up wid de balance of de rich folks in one di-vorce court.'

Hard to Sidestep

"'Dat's de true word,' says I. 'Ef married folks has got time to take stock of each odder's faults, an' thing how agree-able dey is, dey's sho' to find out dat dey can stay married at all.'

"'An' furthermo',' says Ike, 'a man dat got money sho'ly does have to be lak dat Joseph in de Bible dat Brer Jenkins tells 'bout, but which I ain't never met pussonally, dat temptation do good look to him wid straight front figgers an' three-story pompadours, an' warms all around him lak files around de honey pot.'

"'De honey pot?' I echoes.

"'Yasum,' goes an Ike, 'dem' pa' shuly is de fust help to ketch. You don't git out of no 'gamous leadin' de double life, because he's got all he can do to lead a single life wid a wife an' a family, hanselfy. Barfore, dat do' of temptation is shut to de po' man, whilst hit is wide open to de rich man; dough why any man in his right mind wants to git inside dat kine of a honest beats me.'

"'Hit looks lak,' says I, 'dat de onliest way dat woman can keep her husband is to keep his nose on de grindstone.'

"'Don't you worry none 'bout dat, Mirandy,' says Ike. 'I'se gwine to git mine right on de grindstone, an' dese heah Venuses was gwine pass by I couldn't look up enough to see her.'

Husbands That I've Met--Told by a Spinster

The Jealous Husband

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"WHAT'S the matter with Fred?" said the Spinster Lady. "He looks like a perfect thunder cloud."

"Oh, my dear," said his wife, "don't pay any attention to him. He is acting too foolishly for anything. He is jealous; that's all."

"Jealous of what?"

"Of me and everybody that I am decently civil to."

"It must be very threatening."

"Pressure. It's perfectly maddening, and really interferes very seriously with our happiness. Besides that, it is very humiliating to be suspected of some false motive every time I smile at another man."

"Is he jealous of your own people?"

"Yes, of course. He objects to attending to mother or the girls he complains that I don't pay enough attention to him, and says I care more for them than I do for him."

Green-Eyed Monster

"But he knows that you are absolutely devoted to him. What can he be so foolish?"

"When he gets a jealous fit on he simply does not reason; that's all. The other night we dined at the Jenkins', and I just can't imagine who was most interesting. He had just come back from Egypt, where he had made some wonderful explorations. Naturally I listened to him with the greatest interest; and I think you could have seen Fred—"

"What did he do?"

"Sat across the table and glowered. Later in the evening he was eye-pinching me to Professor G——, and when we got home he made such a scene—"

"I don't see why you put up with it," said the Spinster Lady, firmly.

"I wouldn't stand it a minute."

"Perhaps you would find that you had a lot of talking. It does no good. He is always most repentant, and sees how ridiculous he has been, but that never keeps him from being so over."

I wonder what he would do if you were the sort of woman who really did encourage the attentions of other men?"

"Not Happy at Home"

"I sometimes feel tempted to give him real cause for his jealousy. It might teach him a lesson, but it would cause such a scene that I simply haven't the courage to try it."

Just then Fred came into the room, and the Spinster Lady, in a spirit of teasing, said: "Fred, I'm going to marry Hilda off for a few days. She looks as if she needed cheering up."

His face changed instantly.

"Of course," he said stiffly, "Hilda is not happy at home, or she had better go away for a while. I cannot expect her to find pleasure in the society of Fred's family, let alone Fred."

"Fred, dear, don't be so silly," said his wife. "You know I love being with you. There is only Jealousy."

"Oh, those husbands!" said the Spinster Lady to herself a little later, as Alice in Wonderland says, they grow curiouser and curiouser."

Deliver me from a jealous husband. Hilda's life is a burden to her. The Spinster knows a moment's freedom from that absurd jealousy of Fred's.

Helpful hint: It is certainly a good deed of truth in the old song, "Needles and pins needles and pins; when you are marrie your trouble begins."

Sayings of a Cynic

TURN flattery wrong side out and you have slander.

Pay as you go, but try to save enough to get back on.

Somehow, the majority of our good habits never get found out.

Roasting of their strong points is a weakness of most people.

Ever notice how narrow minded most people are who argue with you?

It's easier for a woman to talk on any subject than it is for her to stop.

A confidence man naturally has no confidence in any man but himself.

Many a man's success in life is one who sends out invitations to her elopment.

A woman doesn't object to a husband who has a will of his own—providing it is to her favor.

If people would do half the things they are going to do some day, what a progressive old world this would be!

When a girl tries to dodge a kiss she always manages to do it in a way that makes it easier to catch a crazier night keep.

The average married man has about as much to do with managing his home as a policeman has with managing the family cat.

If you want to spring a surprise on your self, sit down some evening and count the number of white lies you have told during the day.

Bobbie's Slate---By William F. Kirk

Pa, who once led the Vikings, tries a sail; and now his boat is for sale

This picter is Ma & me on the bote. Pa is under the bote, wich turned over.

THE picter on my slate today is a picter of a sail boat, wich is in Boston Harbor. Ma & me is on the top of the bote, hanging on, & Pa is under the bote, wich turned over.

A other bote calm along & sayved us from watery graives. They got Pa out from under the bote & tuny took Ma & me off the bottom of the bote. Pa was the last one of the lotts wen the bote turned over.

The way we calm to be down the harbor in this bote was becawss Pa calm boan & sed At least I have achieved the goal of my desires, at last I am to be a skipper.

What did you mean, sed Ma. I mean, sed Pa, that I am now the sole owner & manager of the good ship Alan Dale.

Where did you git the good ship Alan Dale? sed Ma. I bought it from a actor I used. The actor sed he naimed it the good ship Alan Dale becawss every actor was afrade of it.

But ain't you afrade of it, sed Ma. By no means, sed Pa. Why, woman, sed Pa, was I not the gynt which sailed the Spanish main with old Cap Kidd? Never was there a ship, sed Pa, of wich I was afrade to the cuptips of me.

To-morrow, sed Pa, you & me & little Bobbie & Fido shall go for a sail in the good ship Alan Dale. We shall start at sum up. Yes, sed Pa, & finish just as the sad crimson rays of the westering sun flashes thare lances of glory across the bay, Pa, sed.

So the next morning Pa & Ma & me went down to the shoar & looked at the bote. It seemed a very big bote & it only had two (2) oars. Ma sed to Pa that she didnot like the looks of a bote which only had two (2) sails.

& why dont you like it, sed Pa. Dasnt you know, woman, sed Pa, that many a ship has made history without having no sails on it at all? How about the ships of George Dewey, sed Pa. Tony licked the Spaniards without any sails, didnot they? Cum, sed Pa, & let us board the good ship, Sed Ma, may I ask now you are my sailer. I am a grate sailer, sed Pa. You cum after me & I will be your mate & swimmer, too, sed Ma, but if it dasnt seen for the broiled efforts of a Watery Tar the good ship Alan Dale turned over & Pa turned over & Ma turned over & Bobbie & Fido & me & then I climed on & then the other bote turned over.

Pa has a advertisement in the papers for sail, a Bung-a-low, a Tent, & a Sail Bote.

Erick the Red, Pa told us. They use to say that wenever my sword flashed a enemy took the count.

Before Pa set out toward Cape Cod, sed Pa, on this glorus sail down the harbor, I must tell you of a awful battle which I had with a other Viking which got aout of his beekaus he knew I was a better sailer & he was afrade. His naim was Erling the Bold. I challenged him in three (3) rounds, sed Pa.

Then we all got in the bote & the wind got in the sails & we started out. Pa acted like a good sailer beekaus the bote ran fast as fast as it cud go. The wind was blowing & the sun was fixed rite, sed Pa & I noddest fixed the sails.

While we are talking this glorus event, Mister Milford, called The Annie Nautilus, wich begins Thou Too Sail on O Ship of State While the Lamp Holds Slowly Down the Lane.

Sed Ma, may I ask now you are my sailer. I am a grate sailer, sed Pa. You cum after me & I will be your mate & swimmer, too, sed Ma, but if it dasnt seen for the broiled efforts of a Watery Tar the good ship Alan Dale turned over & Pa turned over & Ma turned over & Bobbie & Fido & me & then I climed on & then the other bote turned over.

Pa has a advertisement in the papers for sail, a Bung-a-low, a Tent, & a Sail Bote.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

UNSATISFACTORY FIANCE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl of nineteen and keeping company with a man of twenty-five. He comes up to the house about three or four times a week and he says he loves me. My folks all know of it and approve of him. One thing that makes me think he does not care for me as he says he does is that he has a friend, and whenever he sees her they are always talking together, and he often leaves me to spend time with his friend home from business. Now, do you think that is right for him to act as he is really engaged to me and expects to be my husband? When I ask him about these things he says that I must understand that he loves me as much as me. He shows he loves me well enough, but I don't like these things. Now, please tell me if you really think that means it when he says he loves me only.

E. U.

HE probably does love you best, but he most certainly has no right to treat you as he does and should she say low it. Ask him if you have his permission to behave as he does and to allow his friends to kiss you. He will be horrified at the thought; and yet you have just as much right to do it as he. Tell him that you cannot be engaged to him if he does not behave differently, and I think you will find that he will stop it.

Proverbs About Months for Brides

HERE is a collection of proverbs purporting to speak oracularly concerning the brides of the months:

A January bride will be a prudent housekeeper and very good tempered.

A February bride will be a kind and affectionate wife and tender mother.

A March bride will be a frivolous chatterbox, and will be given to quarreling.

An April bride will be inconstant, not very intelligent, and very disagreeable.

A May bride will be handsome, amiable and likely to be happy.

A June bride will be impetuous and generous.

A July bride will be handsome and smart, but a trifle quick-tempered.

An August bride will be amiable and sweet.

A September bride will be discreet.

An October bride will be pretty, coquettish, loving, but jealous.

A November bride will be liberal.

A December bride will be fond of novelty and entertaining.

The Heart of a Man

JULY before her at last, complete—the words that made both her own. Her feverish eyes glittered; her cheeks were scarlet as she dwelt upon the thought that would touch the hearts of thousands.

Rising out toward the restless ocean, she listened inwardly to the echo of her own voice. The strains she heard the singing of the sea, the rush of sweet thoughts, the love she had given, Tell him that you cannot be engaged to him if he does not behave differently, and I think you will find that he will stop it.

Impatiently he stood by the table, drumming restless fingers upon the paper. Outside the window was the pale insistence of the evening, the dim outlines building glooming around phantom lights and hooded shapes. Some of the lights flickered suggestively into the darkness. Yet the mist and threatening gloom of the evening seemed to him than his own comfortable apartment. Why, then, did he remain? Why should he go?

Upon the mantelpiece among the litter of photos was a concert ticket, acquired through the influence of a friend. He loved music. The entertainment was for this evening. He looked at it, and a resolve took him to Leicester Hall in ten minutes.

As he passed out its silence fell on the small audience as if by spell—a spell of appeal and of forgiving love. Music had a strange effect upon him. By the words that music lent to the melody, every sentiment in turn, spurring him sometimes to higher thought and action. Never, he had only heard "Pardoning Love." If he had heard it, would he have had the heart to leave her as he had done? A foolish thought, save perhaps to her who understood him as well. If only he had heard it!

Suddenly the scarlet in her cheeks paled to a little as a new thought came to her. If the words and music both were the same, was a chance that he might hear it, and that he, understanding, might feel that he had deserted, and returning to plead for her?

Up and down the chamber he paced, pulling moodily at his cigar, while he brought to mind what he had done. He been? he asked himself. It was symbolized by the walls covered with photographs. He looked at the names of the givers—by the form invitation cards, and the concert ticket, lecture tickets, all unnoticed.

Then he turned in his rapid pacing his hand knocked against a carefully-tied package. It was Hilda's gift, symbolized his life, and showed its futility.

Stale and unprofitable those years of his manhood had been. He realized that now; a meaningless round of pleasures that did not please, and small loves and hatreds that ended nowhere. How he craved for some power outside himself that would destroy the hard crust of selfishness which all these years had prevented true happiness! Weak and faithless he was, yet there were times when his better nature struggled to assert itself. It needed but some stronger influence to help it through.

He had chosen to ignore it, and now, as he paced, the words of the song came to him again, and he listened as if to a voice from the dead.

"Pardoning Love," but to what purpose now? Hilda was dead, and he was alone. He had failed her because he had failed himself. Now it was as if some holier ideals were born forth from the depths of his own nature, and his heart went out to her, not with a man's selfish passion, but in sympathy for her weakness, in courageous desire to shield and protect her, forgetting himself.

So in the glow of that new nobility the man went home and wrote a letter of reconciliation—not to the composer of "Pardoning Love," but to a shallow little society girl who had all but killed his affection with her exactions, whose letters he had scarcely glanced at, whose

Be Neat About Back Windows

IN these days of crowded neighborhoods, when the back windows of one dwelling house face the back door of another, it is necessary have an eye to all-round neatness at those windows. The rights out of the question it is hardly gracious to one's neighbors to leave them an alluring outlook on rubbish, cans and ash barrels. It does not add to one's reputation as a housekeeper and certainly glances one in a position to be criticised for other things besides neatness. The modern housewife is not supposed to have clutter placed anywhere about the premises.

It is not easy to keep the rear of a house looking attractive from the back entrance. The humblest parts, the ugliest part of housework, are done in the kitchen and laundry, and the ways from fuel and food is always with us. But we may screen them from our neighbor's view if we were disposed to do the courteous thing. Trellis and lattice work are excellent for the concealing line, and trees, shrubs and vines are kindly blessings. The health all board is permitted to go into sanitary arrangements, but it would have to possess a thousand eyes to do its work perfectly.

MOLES ON FACE

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Will you please advise me how to get rid of moles on the face? I have four of them and they seem to be getting larger all the time. Yours truly, THE best way to deal with the moles is to have them removed by the electric needle. Be sure that you get a good operator and there will be no scar left. Any other method is sure to leave scars.

TO REDUCE FAT

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Will you please give me a good recipe for reduction of fat? W. E. J.

EAT no fattening foods, but much fruit.

Leave peas, beans, potatoes, etc., alone.

Sleep little and exercise to the degree of fatigue. Taking long walks or runs will reduce fat quickly. Of course this has to be done gradually, as too sudden violent exercise is injurious. Doing housework is about the best exercise to keep down flesh, but it must be the real work about the house and not the cream of it.

OIL TRUST BOOSTS TANK LINE CAPITAL

Increases New Jersey Company Stock from $3,500,000 to $12,000,000.

SUBSIDIARY OF STANDARD

NEW YORK, July 16.—The Union Line Company, one of the original subsidiaries of the Standard Oil Company, filed papers yesterday with the Secretary of State at Trenton, N. J., increasing its authorized capital from $3,500,000 to $12,000,000.

Many times in the past year it has been reported that it was the purpose of John D. Rockefeller to increase the capital stock of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, the parent and holding company of all the subsidiary companies, from $100,000,000 to $500,000,000.

On its present capitalization, the Standard Oil pays dividends of from forty to forty-five per cent yearly, while on the $500,000,000 the dividend distributions would be about seven per cent., and therefore, in the opinion of some Standard Oil men less liable to arouse hostile criticism. Whether the increase of the capitalization of the Union Land Line is a forerunner of similar increases of the capitalization of other subsidiaries, and finally of the parent concern, could not be learned last night.

Death or Rengo,
Which Is It For You?

Always Danger of Fatal End by Allowing Fat to Accumulate. How to Prevent the "Terrible End."

As a rule the victim of fat grows fatter. There is no stopping the growing of fat save by death. It is a fact, and sad because of it. There are hundreds of fat people who positively do not believe it. And they die refusing to believe it. Yet fat there is fable if they and then it grows bold. This solid fat accumulates especially around the heart and although the heart beats, it beats with difficulty, until finally it will skip a beat now and then, then skip two beats, and when it skips more than that—well, you will be already stone dead. These are facts. Startled relatives before whom fat victims have smiled one minute and died the next, can testify to it. It is not a laughing matter.

If you are a victim of this terrifying ever-growing disease you can save yourself from the day you begin to use Rengo.

How long, for instance, will it take you to lose 40 pounds? As a rule only 40 days. In most cases there is a safe loss of a pound a day. Some of these 40 pounds will come off from that fat coating over your heart and mate your life. Your health will at once grow better, the fount of new food will make your muscle grow, clear your mind, vitalize your whole body and make you happy.

This is exactly what has happened to hundreds of fat people who have taken Rengo. It can do as much for you—are you before it is too late.

There is nothing "just as good" as Rengo. For sale by all druggists at $1.00 per full sized box, or by mail prepaid, by The Rengo Co., 3,212 Rengo Bldg., Detroit, Mich. The company will gladly send you a trial package free by mail, if you write them direct to Detroit; no free packages at drug stores.

MORAN ON WAY TO DENVER TO SEEK HEALTH

District Attorney Moran to-day is on the way to Denver, where he goes in search of renewed health. He started yesterday from New York city. If his condition is not speedily improved by the climate and altitude of the country about Denver he will go to Arizona.

Mr. Moran arrived in New York city from Lake Saranac a week ago. While he suffered from the excessive heat in New York, he was quite strong for a man so ill and still possessed the same courage which he displayed when he left Boston. During the week which he spent in New York he remained very quiet and saw only a few intimate friends.

Dr. Timothy J. Reardon of this city visited him there and some few friends and business acquaintances called upon him and discussed his affairs.

One of his friends who saw him said that Mr. Moran is a much sicker man than is generally believed and that he is in a far weaker condition than even he himself suspects. If the mountain air of the country about Denver does not immediately cause his condition to show unmistakable signs of improvement, Mr. Moran will at once start for Arizona.

"I HAVE MY BANK BOOKS BACK"--FITZ

Former Mayor Says He Is All Through with Finance Commission.

READY NOW FOR EUROPE

Michael J. Sughrue, counsel for the Finance Commission, would not talk about the appearance of former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald before that body. "I have nothing to say," he replied when asked if the rumor that Fitzgerald would be called again was true. "Nothing to say," was his reply when asked if it was true, as Fitzgerald said in his statement last night, that Sughrue acquiesced in its purport. Fitzgerald said that he had not been before the commission to be grilled, but merely to give them information as to city affairs during his administration. He said that Sughrue had agreed to such a statement being made public. When Fitzgerald himself was questioned upon his being before the commission again he said: "I have nothing more to add to the statement I issued last night. I am all done with the commission, or at least until I get back from Europe. The commission finished with me yesterday, and now until Saturday I will be busy packing up for my trip abroad. The commission was pleased with the information I gave, and if I shall be called upon when I return home of course I shall be pleased to give the members any further information they may seek.

"I have my bank books back," he concluded.

"I shall sail for Europe on the Cymric at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon, and I have planned to have my daughters, Rose and Agnes, visit my father's old home in Limerick and my mother's home in Cavan."

When he left the room of the Finance commission last night the former Mayor shook hands with Sughrue, and told him that while in Europe he would make a study of municipal conditions and be pleased to give the commission the benefit of his observations. He was thanked very cordially.

Mrs. Cholly Knickerbocker tells all about those Summer gowns, just how to make them, how the newly imported Grecian gowns can be duplicated, how the dresses of changeable colorings of silks made over this material can be made at home—all this is told in a fine page of fashions in next Sunday's BOSTON AMERICAN.

NEW YORK, July 16.—The body of an unidentified girl about twenty-one years old was found early to-day near the Columbus avenue station on the New Haven railroad, between Pelham and Mt. Vernon, with the face crushed in and both feet severed just above the ankles. The girl had apparently been run down by one of the New Haven westbound electric trains.

FAVOR WRIGHT FOR PRESIDENT

COLUMBUS, July 16.—The prohibitionists' national convention adjourned until to-day without hearing a report from the committee appointed to select its permanent officers.

The committee on permanent organization will report to-day and Professor Charles Scanlon of Pittsburg, one of the numerous candidates for the presidency, declares he will be named as permanent chairman.

The presidential nomination is still open, and there has been no marked concentration in favor of any candidate. It was agreed early to-day that the nomination could be had by Sanborn Wright of Georgia if he would express a willingness to accept it.

CHASE TO WED IN WORCESTER

Boston and Worcester society people are by no means surprised at the announcement of the engagement of Miss Harriet Frances Messinger of Worcester and Philip Minot Chase of Marlboro street, Boston. Miss Messinger is one of the most popular debutantes in Worcester society.

She is the daughter of Frank Langdon Messinger of the Worcester County Institution for Savings.

For a couple of months past Mr. Chase has been living in one of the Worcester hotels. During that time both he and Miss Messinger motored together so frequently that they became well known figures in the park and about the city.

Mr. Chase has, since his parents died, lived a great deal with his brother, Dr. Henry M. Chase of No. 109 Marlboro street, in this city, and he is well known in Back Bay society.

MAJESTIC WINS CLOSE SEA RACE

NEW YORK, July 16.—One of the most doggedly contested ocean races in years ended to-day at the Sandy Hook Lightship when the White Star liner Majestic passed in just twenty-five minutes before the Cunard turbiner Carmania, beating the latter in elapsed time by four hours and thirty-four minutes.

All the way across the Atlantic, the two vessels were in communication with each other by wireless.

RALPH ROSE VICTOR IN SHOT PUT EVENT

LONDON, July 16.—Ralph Rose of San Francisco won the 16-pound shot put at the Olympic games to-day, with a put of 46 feet 7½ inches.

Horgan, England, was second in the final, 44 feet 8¾ inches, and Garrelts, America, was third, 43 feet 3 inches.

Wesley W. Coe of the Boston Athletic Association won the first section of this event with a throw of 42 feet 7½ inches.

America and England now stand with four finals each, counting the athletic program, only America now leads in points.

With a push which fairly carried the contenders to other countries off their feet, America aggressively took the lead at the opening of the Olympic games to-day in the Stadium at Shepherd's Bush, not only sending the Stars and Stripes aloft as the first winner of the day in the discus throw, but placing two other Americans in the event, thus strengthening her lead nine points.

A crowd of people which barely sufficed to scatter through the vast amphitheatre saw Martin Sheridan of the Irish American Athletic Club hurl the discus in free style 134 feet and 2 inches this morning. The Olympic record for the discus throw, free style, is 136 feet 1.3 inch, made at Athens in 1906 by Sheridan. Not content with winning all the finals, the Americans gave three men places in this contest, Giffin being second and Horr third.

Started Off Savagely.

The free style discus throw was the first carded event of the morning. The Americans started off savagely, casting themselves into the game with a vim which fully took their rivals by surprise. The first and second sections were combined, and these were easily captured by Burroughes of Chicago. Burroughes's throw came within fourteen feet of the record mark, but that was all.

Desjardins of the New York Athletic Club then assailed the disc and bettered Burroughes's mark by about four feet. And this throw was within the shadow of Sheridan's record cast, for in the fourth section Garrelts of the University of Michigan cast 138 feet 6¼ inches, making a splendid throw.

In the fifth section flight, the giant athlete of the Irish-American Club, threw 129 feet and 5 inches.

Cheered by All Nations.

The superb throw of Sheridan in the finals was received with great enthusiasm, not only by the Americans, but by the entire Stadium.

A new record was also made in the second heat of the 1,500-metre steeplechase race when Meredith of England drove his wheel in 2 hours 43 minutes 12.2-5 seconds. On account of the grilling pace the first heat of this event was run off yesterday.

The day dawned fair this morning, and there was an excellent promise for the sturdy contestants in the contests of muscular skill. America interest was centered in the discus throw and the weight putting event in the latter Ralph W. Rose held the record, his mark being 48 feet 7 inches.

America was expected to win the discus throw, but the ten-mile walking event was looked upon with suspicion. England's athletes are strong in the walking events, and the contest this morning was practically conceded to Great Britain after the first heat.

Another topic of discussion this morning among those who are interested in the games and the outcome was the disqualification of Tom Longboat, the romantic Indian Canadian runner.

Putting sixteen-pound shot, section one—Won by W. Coe, Boston, distance 42 feet 7½ inches.

Fancy diving, fifth heat—Won by Nash, Germany.

1,000-metre bicycle contest, tenth heat, won by Lafgray, France, in 1 minute 22.2-5 seconds; eleventh heat, won by Morrisett, Italy, time 1 minute 21 2-5 seconds; twelfth heat, won by R. J. Jones, England, in 1 minute 23.3 seconds; thirteenth heat, won by Lacey, England, time 1 min ute 22 4-5 seconds; fourteenth heat, won by Kingsbury, England, time 1 minute 22 seconds.

Putting five-pound shot, section one—Won by Rose, America, distance 46 feet 7½ inches.

BIG TREAT FOR HORSEMEN IS ON AT KEITH'S

Horsemen are having a treat served them this week at both the Boston Theatre and the Bijou Dream in seeing thrown on the screen pictures of the prominent horse breeders, Arthur H. Parker, William Russell Allen, Ralph B. Williams, Benjamin Pope and C. W. Lowell.

Those men own the best horses in the world. Mr. Parker has the $32,000 stallion Bingen, 2.06¾; Mr. Allen's farm is Pittsfield is famous wherever the trotter is known, and he has a select lot in training at Readville for the big stake events of the year; Mr. Williams has the best-bred campaigned by Lou McDonald in the West, including Amy Brooks, 2.03¾, the sensational trotter of the season; Mr. Pope is the breeder of The Leading Lady but was so prominent in the Futurity stakes last year and is heavily engaged this season, besides having several promising youngsters now in the stable of Bob Fleming at Readville; and Mr. Lasell is the most prominent amateur driver racing a stable himself down the Grand Circuit. He, too, owns a big breeding farm in Whitinsville.

TWO TOURISTS HAVE MIRACULOUS ESCAPE

BY J. C. KERRISON.

MILFORD, Pa., July 16.—How Christopher White of New York and Burt Corey escaped instant death on the A. A. A. test is almost beyond human understanding. The two men and their cars were thrown down a twenty-five foot embankment while going at a twenty-five mile an hour pace. One was thrown to the right and the other to the left, yet neither received as much as a scratch from this fearful experience, although the car itself is an absolute wreck.

Their car, the Gyroscope, has been out of the competition since the first few days, but has been running as a tourist, just to demonstrate that its gyroscopic principles are practicable.

Yesterday the two men, the former acting as operator and the other as mechanic, left Philadelphia on an easterly route. They, like all other cars, were forced to travel over a portion of road that is under construction at Nazareth. The surface consists of stones and boulders from the size of an egg to that of a cannon ball, the latter predominating for several miles, and in some few cases a full inch of these razored and pointed edges threatening destruction to whatever came in their way.

Gyroscope Lost Its Way.

It was while traveling over this portion of the road that the Gyroscope lost its way and it is now believed strained its steering knuckle. It was while descending a hill just outside of Easton that the steering knuckle of the car broke, and in the twinkling of an eye the car and its passengers were across the road and falling down the twenty-five foot embankment that leads to the Delaware River.

Corey jumped at once, while Clark clung to the steering wheel until the car was half way down, when he was thrown in front and to one side of the car, which was stopped by a buttonwood tree. The force of the impact was so great as to break the radiator and the steering wheel right on to the seats, and yet throughout it all the car remained right side up. White and Corey are both receiving congratulations.

The only change in the standing in either contests caused during the run of yesterday was the penalization of the Hitte Boo in the Howe trophy. It seems that a pinion pin in the transmission became loose, and so much time was lost in making everything tight that the car was late in finishing the run, being penalized some twelve points therefor. The Cleveland likewise lost nine, she being penalized thirty-three points for engine trouble. All the other cars came through in grand good shape, the majority of them using fifty an hour ahead of schedule in arriving here.

The trip from Philadelphia was through a picturesque section of the country, especially the journey through the Delaware Water Gap. The troubles were numerous indeed and it is fortunate that no punctures and holey suits are not counted for, if they were, there is possibly not a single car but what would now be penalized, all of them having had more or less trouble.

It was figured out last night that 42 per cent. of the town had been constructed and that per cent. of the cars had been penalized, 14 cars out of 46 having suffered, while 32 finished into five touring cars and nine runabouts.

Great Interest in Contests.

The interest in both contests is particularly keen and will be until the end. Six clubs are still tied for leading honors for the Glidden, while five cars are tightly fastened in a tie for the Hower.

It is that on this morning as the teams start out. What it will be this evening is particularly difficult to imagine as the incidents of a day are many and varied. No one knows what a day may bring forth and especially such a day as this promises to prove. The course is 158 miles in length and as yet the longest day's work of the tour. The average speed is about 19.15 miles per hour. There is bound to be a lot of hill climbing, the course leading through the Catskills and Saugerties regions, which if memory serves me right, covers quite a bit of sufficient character as to tax the ability of the cars, even though they have already climbed mountains as steep as the side of a house. Every one seems to realize that the day's work counts the closest of study and attention and have prepared accordingly. The Maxim, which on Monday cracked a cylinder, replaced the injured pair with a new casting yesterday and is among the starters this morning, although she will no longer compete for Glidden or certificate honors, have mercifully joined the ranks of tourists.

5th Avenue's Swellest Woolens

REMAINED TO BUY

It was a happy combination of circumstances that made it possible for me to bring to Boston thousands of dollars' worth of the finest imported woolens in the world. It was midsummer. The tailoring business was at a low ebb in New York, no one buying. The receivers of Wessman, Fifth avenue's swellest tailor, had yards upon yards of the most elegant suitings in the world on their hands. They picked me as the "one best bet" to handle such a big proposition. I bought it all for cash. Remember, these suitings were of such a quality that Wessman got from $85 up for suits, $15 up for trousers and everything else in proportion.

HALL, HUNT AND PECK WIN RACES AT READVILLE MEET

BY ED. COGSWELL.

Seven heats concluded the three races on this second day of the Jefferson's Driving Club of Boston, at Readville, which was a good illustration of a short horse soon curried. The winners were Frank G. Hall with Grace, Lewis W. D. Hunt with Alondra and L. R. Pet with Ve-Za-Ka.

Arnold Lawn made a hard bid for Grace, with Dreamwold Tower hanging on, getting the second heat by a narrow margin, but in the third heat his stallion threw a shoe in the homestretch when on about even terms with Gloria Wilkes, and cut his quarter so badly that it is likely that he will be laid on the shelf for at least a couple of weeks.

W. D. Hunt is getting quite accustomed to wearing blue ribbons, as in the meantime he gathered in second one of the season in handy style.

L. R. Pet came up from Providence and, while he failed to return empty handed, Ve-Za-Ka had a world of speed to spare in taking first and Mary Gilmor was unsteady, though showing plenty of brush when she remained as a trotter. Summary:

CLASS A—TROTTING.

L.LILIAN R., 2:06¼, IS WITHDRAWN FROM BIG TROTTING DERBY

If being the date for the third payment on the $50,000 American Trotting Derby to be decided at the Grand Circuit meeting at Readville, the members of the Gentlemen's Driving Club of Boston and their guests devoted the time between heats in choosing the greatest race ever promoted in the history of the harness horse in the world.

Secretary C. M. Jewett said that he had received notice that twelve of the horses first withdrawn, and expects that the list returns by mail are in it will show about eighty-five horses remaining in. It will be remembered that the conditions called for a second payment last month, the list showing 100 horses eligible.

The most noted withdrawal in the third payment has been the prominent mare Lillian R., 2.06¾, owned by David Sauvage of Pittsburg and driven by M. McDevitt. This was a surprise, as it had been reported from Cleveland that she was being prepared especially for the event. In her two years in the Grand Circuit this mare had only suffered a single defeat, by Sonoma Girl, 2.05¾, at Readville, last Summer.

Other Trials in 2:09¼.

Bob Proctor gave the railbirds something to chin about when he stepped Uhlan, the four-year-old trotter owned by Charles Sanders, a couple of miles, the first in 2.11¾, and the repeat in 2.09¾, the last half in 1.04.

Hiram Tozier, too, allowed the four-year-old trotter Cadenza, owned by Wilton Snell, to reel off a mile in 2.17. This was not so fast as to cause comment, but then he let the rest of her try the home stretch from the half in 1.08, showing that she is speedy as well as stout.

Alta McDonald left in the forenoon for Albany, but the hurdle in the track will be shipped Friday or Saturday to Detroit for the Grand Circuit meeting, before catching the train McDonald worked his stake candidate, Amy Brooks, 2.03¾, a mile in 2.10, 2.09¾ and back again in 2.08¾, a much better performance at any time this year in 30s work.

Billy Andrews will ship to-day Sweet Marie, 2.02, and Sonoma Girl, 2.05¾, to Pontiac, Mich., and next week will send his entire string to Detroit.

Andrews Keeps Sonoma Girl.

Jack Crabtree has changed his mind about keeping Sonoma Girl at Readville till the Grand Circuit meeting, but has concluded to let Andrews keep her. She has been entered to be shipped direct to Detroit, where she makes her maiden start of the season, which shows that Lotta's queen trotter will be raced right along down the big line.

Along with McDonald's horses shipped to Detroit, several of the local horses will go that are to start there in the races. Henry Tiller claims of sending the Chimes Bell, Tom Aquin, Hermes and Peter, Jr., by Peter the Great, to the Detroit Mechanic, while W. H. Sprague sends Gene Thitomb.

Secretary Jewett says there is a meeting of the directors of the New England Trotting Association to-day at the Adams House when will be decided the class races for the Grand Circuit meeting. The handicappers, too, for the American Derby have been selected, but he is not now prepared to have their names published.

JOE GANS ON HUNTING TRIP

SAN FRANCISCO, July 16.—Joe Gans is now at Harbin Springs in Lake County, where Jeffries trained for his last fight, and he will start to-day for a four days' hunting trip with some friends.

Before Joe left here it leaked out that the doctor whom he consulted warned him against eating too many sweet things, and told him he would have to watch his diet carefully. This medical advice may throw a damper on what Joe likes best of all, but it is probable that he will do as he is told. By, I've had hundreds of boyd fans tell me the impossibility of getting a man to do what Joe has done before and stay entirely. They couldn't stand the pressure.

CELEBRATION OR NO BASEBALL

WORCESTER, July 16.—Prohibition is killing baseball in the South, according to President Sullivan of the Savannah Baseball club, who is now on a scouting trip.

"Unless the laws are changed and become more lax, baseball, professional baseball in the South will be a thing of the past," he said. "Funny as it may seem, if fans can't drink and bet they lose interest. As a victory, they don't care for the game. Two years ago that down there, and since this year has dropped off 50 per cent. The result on who pays the freight has done it. Way, I've had hundreds of loyal fans tell me the impossibility of getting a man to do what Joe has done before and stay entirely. They couldn't stand the pressure."

NEW 3-MILE BIKE RECORD.

SALT LAKE CITY, July 16.—The three mile open professional bicycle record was broken by A. McFarland, whose time was 5m. 53s. The former record, 5m. 56 4-5s., was established by Iver Lawson in 1905.

WILL HANLON LEAD YANKS?

Is Ned Hanlon to take up the task dropped by Clarke Griffith and now resting upon the shoulders of Norman Elberfeld?

A report from Baltimore is to the effect that Frank Farrell is trying to get the former leader of the Brooklyn and Cincinnati teams to take hold of the Yankees and put them upon their feet.

It is said that Elberfeld's election as manager is but temporary and that Farrell has determined to do away with the style of play engineered by Griffith and followed by the little shortstop.

NOT LIKE OLD DAYS, SAYS JEFF

LOS ANGELES, July 16.—"Quit refereeing? Who, me? Oh, I don't know about that," said Jim Jeffries, with a bored look on his sunburned countenance, as he pulled one of his massive "pans" across his mouth to smother a yawn. "I get mighty disgusted with the whole fight game when things like this McFarland incident occur, and you needn't be surprised if I sit right down and away from the ring for good one of these fine mornings. You see refereeing is such a thankless proposition. A fellow goes into the ring and tries to be absolutely honest and give a decision as he sees it, but there is always some pesky little boy like McFarland to get up and whine about being robbed. My wife wants me to get away from the fight business altogether, and I expect to do so one of these days. The present day fighters are a lot of nonentity and speculators. Why, do you know (and here big Jeff laid back and yawned very much like a huge grizzly bear just awakening from an enjoyable nap in the sun) that as long as I was the active champion of the world I never received a guarantee from a fight club; no, sir, not once. I always went in and fought on my own merits as a drawing card, and was satisfied at that."

JOE WALCOTT HISSED.

NEW YORK, July 16.—Jack Robinson of Chicago easily outpointed Joe Walcott of New York in their six round bout at the Whitehall Athletic Club. Walcott never had a chance during any of the rounds and failed to show any of his oldtime cleverness or form, and the spectators hissed through the early rounds to force more active fighting on Walcott's part.

FARMER BURNS IN STAR BOUT

"Farmer Burns, Jr.," one of the best lightweight wrestlers ever developed in his country, was signed by the games committee of the Boston Caledonian Club to wrestle Bob Somerville, world's champion at his weight, to a finish at the potch picnic on August 8 at West Roxbury.

The deal was completed when Burns gave his willingness and announced that he would come East at once to continue training for the event.

The contest will be best two out of three falls to a finish, under catch-as-catch-can rules, and will be for the 130-pound championship.

The match brings together the best men in their classes in America and the United Kingdom.

The committee is working to secure another world's title holder to appear against some first-class man.

RED SOX TEAM LEADERS AT BAT

According to the official batting averages of the American League, just issued, the Red Sox team is first with a mark of .259, while Detroit second, eight points behind. The locals have made 382 hits, which is 36 more than the Browns, who have the next to the most and third in its standing.

HORSEMEN TO HAVE OUTING

All preparations for a grand outing down the harbor by the members of the Dorchester Driving Club, and others to the outing to local driving clubs, have been completed by the committee having the affair in charge.

Wednesday, August 12, is the day selected, and a steamer has been engaged to hold 250 persons. The boat will leave Atlantic avenue at 1:30 o'clock. After a sail around the harbor, at which different events with music will be enjoyed aboard, a stop will be made at Rainsford Island for dinner. In every way it is counted on being the best outing held by local horsemen since the organization of driving clubs.

Of Course, Mr. Cole Will Be Nominated

He Has Proved Himself Just the Sort of Tool the Democratic-Republican Political Trust Wants in Office

Mr. John N. Cole, of Andover, attacks in his newspaper a judge in that town who actually has the audacity to endeavor to enforce the laws against the overspeeding of automobiles.

He even goes to the length of intimating that the judge profits financially by the fines he imposes upon law-breakers.

He refers to the "Court" in quotation marks, intimating thereby that the judge is unworthy of the name.

He inveighs against a "trap" for catching law-breakers, as if it were a crime to endeavor to enforce the law.

Mr. Cole himself is in the business of making laws, we regret to say. With the aid of the Democratic party, which, in his town, as in the State of Massachusetts at large, is merely an annex to the Republican party, Mr. Cole has been elected several times to the Legislature. Having arrived in the Legislature, he has been repeatedly elected Speaker by the Republican AND the Democratic members. He has, therefore, had more to do with the making of laws in Massachusetts in the last few years than any other individual man.

Mr. Cole is a fair type of the politician that the Democratic-Republican political Trust puts in power. Everyone who knows him realizes that he is a tricky, unscrupulous hypocrite. The fact that he took a fat contract for printing from the Shoe Machinery Trust while legislation vitally affecting the interests of the Trust was pending before him as Speaker is only one of the things in Mr. Cole's public career that win for him the dislike of self-respecting men.

He is now engaged in the act of having himself made Lieutenant-Governor of Massachusetts. He has the support of the public service corporations, for whom he has performed many acts of kindness in his official capacity at the State House, and he also has the aid of their professional lobbyists, such as Guy Currier and Jake Wardwell.

Mr. Frothingham, his principal opponent, might as well shut up his campaign headquarters and save his money. John N. Cole, who takes profits from corporations interested in legislation while he is Speaker, and who attacks a judge for endeavoring to enforce the law, will, OF COURSE, get the nomination.

Eben S. Draper and John N. Cole! Won't that be a sweet-smelling ticket for the bi-partisan political Trust?

Endangering Life for Profit

Insurance of Hotels and Tenements Should Be Made ILLEGAL

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner

Two hotels burned at Coney Island. Many people narrowly escaped with their lives. If the fire had broken out a little sooner, in the dark, many lives would have been lost. The proprietor of one of the hotels remarked in regard to his fire:

> There was no chance to save the building when the artificial shrubbery, which is given a green coloring with benzine and liquid rubber, took fire. The fake shrubbery extended for eighty feet around the veranda, and the flame spread through it like a train of gunpowder.

That tells a story of disregard for human life. To ornament a hotel with benzine-covered imitation shrubbery is charmingly reckless.

The wife of the man who managed the hotel with this shrubbery death trap left ten thousand dollars' worth of diamonds in the hotel—so it is said. It would have been a good thing if the law had compelled the spending of some of that money to make life safe. That would have been a better thing than to spend it to make some lady glitter.

We repeat, what we have said before. NO PROPRIETOR SHOULD BE ALLOWED TO INSURE ANY BUILDING IN WHICH HUMAN LIFE IS RISKED.

A great many men were burned up in that murderous Windsor Hotel fire in New York. The hotel belonged to a man worth many millions. If he hadn't been ABLE to insure himself against loss FOR A FEW DOLLARS, he would have insured himself against loss BY MAKING HIS HOTEL FIREPROOF, protecting it with watchmen, and thus he would have saved scores of LIVES BY SPENDING A FEW MORE DOLLARS.

If the tenement house owner were forbidden to insure his tenement house, AS HE SHOULD BE FORBIDDEN, he would attend personally to the shavings and other rubbish in his cellars, to the dangerous condition of the dumb-waiter shafts, and to the incendiary tendencies of any of his tenants.

Where human beings sleep entirely at the mercy of some other man's care, THAT OTHER MAN SHOULD BE FORBIDDEN TO PROTECT HIMSELF WITH INSURANCE. He should be compelled to protect his property by vigilance.

Hundreds of millions of property are destroyed in this country BECAUSE OUR INSURANCE SYSTEM DESTROYS CAUTION, MAKES OWNERS INDIFFERENT OR SOMETIMES EVEN ANXIOUS FOR A FIRE.

Insurance companies take about a hundred millions a year out of the public, AND THEY NEED A FEW FIRES TO ADVERTISE THE BUSINESS.

Thousands of millions have been uselessly destroyed by fire, and thousands of millions more will be destroyed. THIS WOULD BE STOPPED IF A MODIFICATION OF OUR INSURANCE SYSTEM COMPELLED OWNERS TO TAKE PRECAUTIONS AND TO WATCH THEIR PROPERTY.

The loss of wealth in the burning up of these buildings is AN ABSOLUTE LOSS TO THE NATION, and the insurance in no way replaces it. For the labor and material destroyed in a building are lost forever.

It is a stupid insurance system, one that calls for control by Government, and some time we shall have such control.

Modify the insurance system, and neither the owner of the Coney Island hotel, "surrounded with inflammable fake shrubbery," nor Mr. Gerry, the famous millionaire, will own a tinder box in the heart of a great city, watch it burn while scores are killed, then calmly take his insurance money and build a more profitable structure.

The Diary of a Camper

By Wex Jones

No more of the city's heat and dust. Me for the sandy beach and the rolling ocean; the sky my roof and the clean sand my bed. Plenty of fresh air and salt water.

* * *

Picked out an ideal spot on the beach. Long stretch of fine sand; water at high tide lapping up to door of tent. Can't understand why every one doesn't live in a tent and get close to Nature's heart.

* * *

Got the tent pitched to-day. Looks simple, but it's quite a job in reality. Back feels broken and shoulders sore. But it's fine to run around in a bathing suit. Can't understand why everyone doesn't wear a bathing suit. Would be nice and cool on Tremont street.

* * *

Morning—Large blisters all over shoulders, arms, back and legs. Never thought sun could be so strong. When I move a hand or foot a square yard of skin seems to crack in twenty places.

* * *

Evening—Been lying on cot all day wrapped in a suit of vaseline. Cot most uncomfortable thing to lie on. Seems to have been designed to do away with alarm clocks, for five minutes after lying down on it I am wishing it was time to get up again.

* * *

Funny how everything in a camp seems to bite. Ants, flies, mosquitoes, and even in the water the crabs seem to regard toes as a sort of bonbon to be crunched at once. There are none of these things in town.

* * *

Got up this morning hungry as a hunter.

Smith was cook. He put what looked like a section of brownstone on the table. "What's this?" I asked. "Steak," he replied. "It slipped off the pan when I picked it up and fell in the sand, but I guess it's all right. Ever eat sanded steak? Well, never do, unless your'e a friend of some struggling young dentist.

Sugar was all sand, except the ants.
Coffee was all sand.
Bread was sand.
Butter was solid sand. Science note: A pound of butter can absorb five gallons of sand.

Compromised on dish of breakfast food. Couldn't tell whether that was sand or not. Never noticed any sand in our flat.

* * *

"May expect a little humidity," an experienced camper told me before I left the city. Yesterday there was some humidity. Knives rusted. Dollars wilted. Socks dripped. Blankets steamed. Water moist. Skin wet. Clothes rutted. Wonder why so many people go camping?

* * *

Large gale of wind. Fly of tent flew. Smith chased it. I chased remainder of tent. Caught it three miles down the beach and returned. Everything else, including pair of twenty-five pound dumbbells, strewn over three acres of tempestuous ocean. Wonder why any one goes camping?

Found we couldn't put up tent again until wind moderated, so we took turns lying on it to keep it down. When I was back at work.

* * *

Back at work. Flat for me to-night. Glad? Oh, ho!

Neglect in Child-Training

Many Grow Into Anaemic and Puny Men and Women That Might Be Robust and Beautiful

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner

DEAR MADAM: would you not try to have your most valuable idea of deep breathing introduced in the schools, which would mean so much to our half-developed children? It is in your power to make this whole land see the importance of your good advice in this line, so please help the children and continue to write on the great idea, which I have tried and found to be true. Respectfully,

J. O. SMITH.

My correspondent evidently realizes the necessity of making the children of the land understand the importance of right breathing, and concentration, and kindness to dependents of all kinds, whether beasts or human. But when any attempt to influence the school methods is essayed one might as well batter away at a stone wall with an airgun. Our schools and colleges have done, and are doing, wonderful things for humanity, but one-half hour a day, divided into halves—fifteen minutes for deep breathing and proper attitudes and fifteen for little talks and stories about our responsibilities toward the weaker creatures of earth—would do more to evangelize the world than all the money spent on altar cloths and expensive church edifices.

A Little Time Daily

THE average parent, while ready to die for a child, will not devote one-half hour regularly to teaching the little one how to sit and how to inflate all its lung cells, and how to be always thoughtful and considerate toward the unfortunate and the voiceless. These parents will urge their children to "be good and kind," and will expend their last dollar in "educating" them.

There is nothing a father or mother will not sacrifice to obtain the best medical attention for an ailing child, but I have yet to see three mothers who will sit down with a narrow-chested child and teach it to take deep inhalations of air for five minutes every morning and every night, and I have yet to find among a large circle of acquaintances that number of mothers who employ ten minutes a day to calling the attention of the growing young mind to the practical methods of being kind to all God's created things. "Be good, be kind," are only words to a child. All children are little, restless, hungry, amusement-craving animals, without reasoning powers, until the divine nature within is awakened by right training and right associations. It is useless to tell a child to "be good" and then to allow it to follow a poor pedler or street beggar with shout and jeer or to torment the cat or the dog. The child does not know that its conduct is unkind; it only knows it is giving vent to its excessive spirits and exuberant vitality. It is for the parent to teach it what kindness means, not by scolding and preaching and whipping, but by daily tender talks and object lessons.

What Parents Might Do

A LITTLE chat about the pathos of dumb animals, who cannot speak when they are hungry or in pain, and of their craving for affection and their appreciation of kindness, and of our responsibility toward them; a frequent reference to the sorrow of the poor and wretched human beings of earth who are without homes and deprived of the advantages of the more fortunate; a daily remark concerning the equality of all souls in God's sight—all these things are the seeds which parents should be sowing with care and patience in the soil of young minds.

Teachers are as responsible as parents, and the same method of practical education in heart culture should be followed by them. It is useless to undertake to teach a child anything spasmodically. Just as music requires daily practice, so health and kindness must be given daily attention by guardians of the young. I know a young girl who has been the companion of a thoughtful father, whose employment is such that he spends many hours in his home. Drop by drop he has instilled the blessed waters of consideration for others and continual kindness into her mind, until her whole nature is impregnated with these qualities. One day, as she was about to follow a poorly dressed old man into a trolley car, the conductor roughly pushed the man back for the dainty child to precede him.

Help Body and Soul

"I THINK the conductor was so unkind," she said to me a moment later. "I wish I had asked him to let that poor old man go in first and so I needn't be needed it more than I did." The same child does not hesitate to run to the assistance of a colored woman who has dropped her bundles or to defend the street beggar from the persecutions of her companions. This is education! And, alas! how rare it is. Yet this same child, I am sorry to say, speaks with the head and throat, and not with the chest, and does not use more than half her lung cells in breathing, and has bent over her books to study and read, and neither parents nor teachers teach her better.

As a result she will grow up with heart and brain well directed, but will be ruined by the unfortunate American nasal voice, and by an undeveloped chest. And all the education in the world cannot make a woman charming if her voice is unmusical; and her usefulness in life will be handicapped if she is anaemic and hollow-chested, since her health will not be robust.

The perfect woman must needs possess heart, mind and health. If she lacks either, blame her parents and teachers.
